BRYANT WASHBURN'S "VENUS IN THE EAST" AN AMUSING PICTURE

Popular Paramount Star Has An Excellent Role in New Photoplay

Bryant Washburn, the popular Paramount star, will be seen in "Venus in the East," one of the most amusing serio-comic pictures of the season, at the Arcade theatre today and tomorrow. The original was published in the Saturday Evening Post some months ago and the story is by Wallace Irwin. The scenario is by Gardner Hunting, and is fully as entertaining, it is declared, as the original printed version.

On the same program will also be shown the first Prizma film to be shown in La Grande. These films are photographed in nature's own colors by a special process and are said to be the supreme achievement in the photographic art.

The subject to be presented today and tomorrow shows Kilauea, the largest active volcano in the world photographed in the same colors the naked eye would see it.

BEST AND MOST SUCCESSFUL FAIR

tators lingered long after the time came for closing the show. Exhibitors and visitors were all well pleased with the meeting and taking the show as a whole, to quote Mr. Reynolds again, it was the "best and most satisfactory ever held in Oregon."

Mr. Reynolds was also an exhibitor and came back with an arm full of ribbons and one grand champion, and one junior champion. His exhibits were all in the horse department. His famous Clydesdale mare, Bonnie, returned again with another grand champion banner, making five to her credit now.

"Union county made a firstclass showing" said Mr. Reynolds. Bob Withycomb's saddle horse comes back as grand champion, and the Union county agricultural exhibit under the direction of County Agent Paul Spillman was the center of attraction.

Albert Hunter was one of the judges in the heavy draft horse contest, and gave such general satisfaction that numerous requests have already been filed with the management to have him appointed again for the 1920 meeting.

OPPOSITION TO LEAGUE OPPOSITION TO LABOR

PUEBLO, Colo., Sept. 29.—Senators who are opposing the league of nations are doing so because it gives labor too many rights, James C. Bulger of Denver, president of the Colorado state federation of labor, Sunday declared in a speech before a mass meeting of over 100 persons, held at a local park at the call of representatives of the 6500 steel workers on strike here.

"Hhese senators are not fighting the league becaus they think it will not prevent war," said Mr. Bulger. "They know it will prevent war. They are fighting it because they know that it contains provisions too favorable to labor—such as the right of free assembly. They don't want labor to have too many rights."

That distress is already in evidence among some of the strikers was admitted by Mr. Bulger, who blamed the "starvation wages" paid by the Colorado Fuel and Iron company, owner of the Minnequa steel plant, to which the strikers were employed.
