AUTO TRIP THROUGH CANADA

(Continued from Page 1) this year, when they have an enormous crop and will receive big returns. Among the places visited was Pentleton. In a building in that town they saw place where the late W. G. Snodgrass has his store. The sign carrying the proprietor's name is still just as it was twenty-five years ago. Among the other former La Grande people encountered was "Babe" Getchell, who is a railroad conductor, and Moritz Walmer, who has charge of a railroad pumping station. Frank Abbott, who was formerly station agent here and a son-in-law of Mr. Snodgrass, is conducting a laundry business at Pentleton. "That country has fine roads," says Mr. Masterton and he further asserts that this kind of improvement both in extent and character is far ahead of what anyone could imagine who has not been through that country. According to Mr. Masterton this country is away behind in the matter of easy traveling facilities, and he thinks it would do a lot of good if some of us could see what a country with well improved good roads looks like.

home of Mrs. L. L. Coker, where the "events" of the afternoon took place. Mrs. C. Humphreys set the key note for the afternoon in her devotional hour, after which the interest centered on the three contests. The judges chosen were Rev. Eels of Union, Rev. James A. Smith and Mrs. Harry Talbot of La Grande, while Rev. Westwood of Baker called time on the contestants.

The first contest was a "Four Minute Talk"—"Why the Jubilee." The contestants were Mrs. Westwood of Baker, Mrs. J. K. Wright of La Grande, and Mrs. L. Eaton of Union.

Story Telling Contest The second was a model study class using a chapter from the new study book. The ladies in this contest were Mrs. J. W. Huff, Baker, and Miss Cadwell of Union.

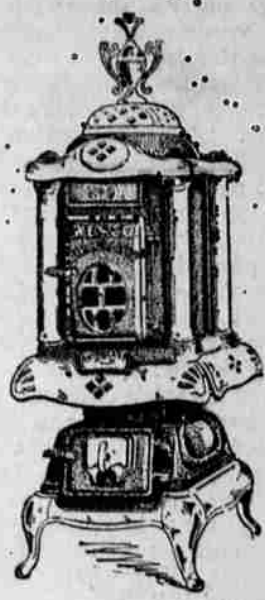

The third was a story telling contest. The story was one chosen from the new book for children, "The Honorable Crimmon Tree," and the story was "The Winning of the Corn Contest." Mrs. E. A. Stevenson of Baker, Mrs. Ray Murphy of La Grande and Mrs. Margaret Smith of Union were the story tellers in this contest.

The contests were interspersed with solos by Miss Ruth Schirb. Each "event" was worthy of any audience gathered together in any large city. The contestants were well prepared and covered the points so thoroughly and in a most spirited and fascinating manner. The enthusiasm of the audience ran high and each one was warmly applauded. Those who had gone to boost for their own representatives were unconsciously swept into boosting for each contestant, so unique was each individual effort.

The judges had the hardest task of all, for the merits were so evenly matched, but the judges awarded the prize to Mrs. Westwood in her first contest, Miss Cadwell of Union in the second contest and Mrs. Ray Murphy of La Grande in the third.

Slides Prove Popular The last number on the program was a stereopticon lecture by Mrs. H. J. Ritter of La Grande. She
