HE WENT TOO FAR

Baby Elephant Suffered for His Mischievous Prank.

Trick That Was Too Much for Mother's Patience to Endure Reward—ed by the Equivalent to a Sound Spanking.

In a recent exchange it is stated that elephants are amazingly like human beings in the way they discipline their young. In proof it tells an amusing incident seen by a French traveler in an extensive lumber yard in Burma.

While the adult elephants were faithfully at work the youngsters played about the yard. The elephant that attracted the traveler's particular attention was hauling, in her chain harness, huge tree trunks from the bank of the river. She had a heavy load, a fact that her offspring did not realize. Bent on playing a prank, he wound his little trunk around one of the chain traces and pulled back with all his strength.

Conscious of the suddenly increased weight, the mother stopped and looked around. She saw the youngster and shook her head solemnly, but, paying no further heed to his teasing, bent again to her work. Meanwhile the little rascal with his mischievous trunk had loosened the ring that fastened the traces to the load.

While the mother was straining to set her burden in motion again, her rascally son pulled with all his might against her, and pulled so steadily that she was quite unaware that she had been disconnected from her load. Then, suddenly, the youngster let go. Naturally enough, the mother was thrown to her knees and her driver hurried to a wide circle from her back.

The culprit caught a huge wood-pile that seemed to offer him at least a temporary protection. His mother, with her iron harness clanging noisily behind her, kept close at his heels.

Although the little one's greater agility gained some space for him at the moment, his mother eventually overtook him. The first blow of her trunk drove from him a bawl of pain. At the second he sank, quite humbled, to his knees; and then he endured without a murmur, although with many tears, a sound thrashing. Finally the mother let him up. With tears still streaming and with drooping trunk he took his disconsolate way out of the yard.

The little fellow had won the complete sympathy of the observer. Consequently he was overjoyed to witness during the noon hour a touching reconciliation. The mother did all she could to comfort the penitent little animal; she pressed him with her trunk, cuddled him up against her, and looked at him as if to say "You still have a mother who loves you."—Our Dumb Animals.

Dogs in a Different World.

It is widely known that fishes and other lower vertebrates possess numerous types of sense organs quite unlike anything in our own bodies, and it is quite impossible for us to form any conception of what the world appears like to these animals except insofar as their sensory equipment is similar to our own.

Even the companionable dog, who responds so sympathetically and intelligently to our moods, lives in a very different world. Recent experiments have shown that his sense of vision is very imperfect, especially for details of form, and everybody knows the innumerable delicacy of the hound's sense of smell. With us vision is the dominant sense, and our mental imagery is largely in terms of things seen. Even a blind man will say, "I see how it is," when he comprehends a demonstration.

What sort of a world is it to a dog, whose finest experiences and chief interests are in terms of colors?—C. Judson Herrick, in Natural History.

Not Responsible.

The justice of the peace of a certain town was a hardened old bachelor, notoriously averse to marriage. His most intimate friend was to be married and insisted that he perform the ceremony. After much persuasion the justice consented and the affair went on smoothly until the last interrogation. "Do you take this woman to be your lawful wedded wife?" was asked in a pathetic tone.

"I do," was the response. "Then I pronounce you man and wife, but remember, Jack, you asked me to do this. Don't ever blame me for it."

Didn't Amount to Much Then.

Elmer was boasting to his younger brother about how smart he was when he was a year old. "I could walk and run and jump," he bragged, "and sing a song."

"An' what was I doing then?" inquired Willie. "Did I run and jump, too?"

"You couldn't do nothing," was Elmer's crushing reply. "When I was a year old you was nowhere; you was just a speck of dust."

Illustrating a Point.

While going to church I was detained by a friend, and when I arrived there I was late, for the preacher was already speaking. At the time of my entrance he was saying, "He who sinneth shall fall," when suddenly I tripped over a cane which a man had carelessly put out in the aisle. I went to my seat, red as a beet, among broad smiles from the audience.—Exchange.

MRS. BOND ONLY WEIGHED 88 LBS.

Is Regaining Weight and Recovering Rapidly Since Taking Tanlac

"I just feel so well pleased with the wonderful good Tanlac has done me that I wish everyone in the world knew what a great thing it is," was the statement made recently by Mrs. J. F. Bond, who lives at 421 First st., Long Beach, Cal., when she called at the Owl Drug Co., in Los Angeles, a few days ago.

"In February I had a very severe operation and afterwards I could not get back to my normal condition," she continued. "My stomach didn't function properly, and I would suffer from indigestion and sour gas. I lost my appetite entirely and fell off rapidly until I weighed only eighty-nine pounds. I was as nervous as I could be and couldn't bear to hear any little noise out of the ordinary. Gas would form on my stomach and at times I would have awful smothering spells, and often at night I would have to sit up for hours to get my breath. Sleep was out of the question for I would roll and toss all night long, and when I got up in the morning I could hardly tell I had been to bed at all. I also suffered from constipation. In spite of all the medicines I tried I got worse instead of better."

"One day I saw a testimonial in the paper about a case very similar to mine, and the wonderful results derived by the use of Tanlac. I got a bottle at once, and sir, I could tell immediately that I was getting better, and by the time I had finished my fourth bottle I had recovered completely. My stomach was never in better condition, and I have no trouble at all with indigestion. I'm not the least bit nervous, and don't have those awful smothering spells any more. I sleep good all night long, and when I get up every morning I feel fresh and fine. I eat anything I want, and have already gained eight pounds. I'm never constipated now. Tanlac is a splendid medicine, and I'm thankful for it has made me a happy woman. No, I don't care if you publish this statement for if I can help even one suffering person to health and happiness by publishing my experience with Tanlac I will be repaid."

Tanlac is sold in La Grande by Silvertone drug store; in Union, by L. A. Wright; in North Powder, by L. Russell; in Elgin, by Scott & Harris, and in Toloacas, by Tolocan Grocery store.

Ineffective Hollering.

"The man that hollers about his 'bein' jes' as good as any other man," said Uncle Eben, "mos' generally ain't doin' enough useful work to prove his argument."
