MANY ATTEND SHOW OPENING

Carnation Milk company to individual displays of farmers from small Oregon ranches—the Pacific International Stock show will surpass even the big show held each year at Chicago, when the aristocracy of stockdom is gathered in review. Many of the animals entered here have won merit in eastern shows, and here will compete with coast products.

The show covers every phase of stock raising, from ponderous beef cattle and heavy draft horses down through dairying cattle, swine, sheep and poultry.

A special department, covering some 4000 feet of floor space, making virtually a show within a big show, is given over to an exhaustive display of dairy products.

At this show daily educational lectures will be given, and demonstrations of the use and manufacture of dairy products of all kinds will be given.

Everything has been done for the accommodation of visitors to the show, the Pacific International Live Stock Show association having established a housing bureau, from which delegations and other visitors will be directed to rooms reserved for them.

From the very first minute of the show there has been apparent on all sides the care taken in its preparation and the skill and ability of those who have had the arrangements in charge. Among the many exhibitors are several from the La Grande section. They
