Sunday at the Pacific International Show

Many of our livestock planters have dreamed of a great livestock show for the Northwest and we who are at Portland this week are realizing that the dreams of our late Governor Whitcomb and other pioneers, has been realized. We have heard of the progress of the construction of the Pacific International buildings here not real and what has been accomplished. You that have attended the Kansas City Royal, the Chicago International and other great shows, maintain that the buildings here are the best of their kind in the United States. You can but admire the results that have been attained and we, who made our annual contributions, have been better spent than our fond hopes dictated.

Sunday morning Lester Blockard, Howard Glenn and Albert Bosquet, the Union county stock judging team, accompanied by itself, arrived in Portland. The boys are getting settled in their special quarters and becoming acquainted with other boys from over the state who are coming in to compete in the largest boy's judging contest held in the northwest.

This afternoon had a large crowd of Portlanders making a preliminary inspection of the grounds and stock. Of course, there is a liberal sprinkling of up-state people who intend "taking in" the show from start to finish, not to mention a goodly sprinkling of retired farmers who with their wives are renewing acquaintance with the livestock which they now only see on such occasions as this and from remarks of the wives of these men, they know good cattle when they see them. Of course, every other stage and station in life is here, from the top with the Charlie Chaplin mustache who carries a white hip dog under his arm, to the hairy faced individual who looks for the world like the picture we see of our bewhiskered friends in Russia. Then there is the lady who barely escaped with her life from the "mouth" of a three day old Jersey calf, all that saved her being a timely warning of "Lookout, he'll bite you." She made a rather ungraceful retreat, but just think what might have happened!

Union county stock men are in evidence, although we have not seen all of them as yet as many of their entries have not arrived. Roy Naval was located at the washing racks supervising the proper bathing of one of his Holstein heifers. A. R. Hunter was busy filling in the report sheets for the build-up superintendent, while Gus Levy was found industriously exercising his saddle horses, as was also Mrs. Mary Moss, formerly of Union. G. W. Delay was found putting up the last of the signs over his cattle and wearing a rather satisfied smile over his Spokane and Lewiston shows.

John Green was seen leading one of his Shorthorns back to his stall all properly washed and ready to be exhibited. We did not see J. E. Reynolds, Floyd McKennon was in sight out in front of the main pavilion craning his neck watching his chance to catch a complimentary

Direct to the Baker theatre, which were being dropped from a hyper-plan* overland. Wade took was caught in the act of exchanging one of these tickets just as he would have had W. W. Green of Union was giving the Shorthorn show the once over. Church Burson of Enterprise was located in a safe place making a great record, but says he spends the greater part of his time with his Herefords. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Peyle were on the train from La Grande but have as yet not put in an appearance.

The stock pavilion is filled to its limit, and the greatest show of its kind ever held in the west is on. To you who have hesitated about attending the show, I would recommend that you "hurry" the price and put in at least one day here.

Entries from British Columbia, Washington, Oregon, California, Idaho, Montana, Colorado, Kansas City and other points are here for your inspection. Better take a couple of days off and attend the biggest and best ever.

FLORENCE REED
AT STAR TOMORROW

For over two weeks, every afternoon and evening, the big Casino Theatre, Broadway, New York City, was filled to capacity when "Wives of Men" was being shown here. This big seven part special feature starring Florence Reed is one of the screen's most dramatic stories. It contains enough thrills and startling situations to make a half-dozen of the so-called program features. From the time of the astounding revelations brought out at the wedding in the first reel until the surprise ending in the seventh part the interest never lags for a moment. It is one of the greatest pictures we have ever presented at the Star Theatre tomorrow and Friday.

From the opening title of the picture, which announces the head some Bert Lytell as the star of a refreshing comedy drama entitled "Easy to Make Money," to the very last scene of this delightfully entertaining Metro serial play, the ever-popular Lytell played his own admirable self as never before.

By a steady plea an entire audience with his efforts is a rare thing, but at the finish of the picture at the Sherry Theatre yesterday the audience moved out voicing its enthusiastic approval of the work of Lytell and his excellent
