PUSS AND THE INK - Puss had a pure white coat and she was very proud of her fine books. She prided that her good Tony had called her vain.

One day when everybody was out Puss ran upstairs and began to look out for a nice soft place to take a nap. She selected the sofa in the library, and was just about to jump up on it when something on the big desk attracted her attention. Some one had left a plate there and Puss thought there might be something to eat on it. But the plate was empty, and Puss went about to jump down when she suddenly caught sight of herself in a mirror standing on the desk.

Puss stood up and stretched herself. She turned her head to one side and then the other, while she admired her own self. "My tail is much longer than the pussys' next door," she thought, with a proud smile.

When their mistress came home they were both rather proud of getting into mischief. Puss was rather proud of her red spots, and she was off her white coat, but poor Toby crawled out of sight; he was quite ashamed.

"If I keep away from her after this," he said, "she is so vain she can't see how funny she looks. Cats are not to be used, anyway, only to get us into trouble." (Copyright)

Handel's Spopulated Lute - An aristocratic musical instrument still found, but very popular in the middle ages was the lute. At the present day its direct descendant, the mandolin has all but entirely supplanted it.

Owls in Old University City - Owls, as is proper in the case of birds of such renowned solemnity and secluded habit, have always exhibited a particular liking for Oxford university. Recently they have established a new colony in the ivy-covered walls of the Hallian library and the Palace of the Five Orders.

Color and Precious Stones - Diamonds are not always crystal clear, but vary greatly as to color and few of the precious stones are true to color. The famous Hope diamond is a real and most beautiful blue-green diamond, and these are of a lovely crimson, but these are very rare. Black diamonds are common enough. Black pearls are rare, but are found. Pink pearls are greatly prized.

He Should Worry - He was a wise man that said that he hadn't time to worry. In the day-time he was too busy and at night he was too sleepy. -The Black and Blue Gents (New Concord, Ohio)

The Newly Married - Nothing is to me more distasteful than that entire complacency and satisfaction which beam in the countenances of a newly married couple. It tells you that they are disposed of in this world; that you can have no hope of her. It is true I have never wished either, perhaps, but this is one of those "birds" which ought, as I said before, to be taken for granted, but expressed. -Charles Lamb

A Dream - A Boston banker says he had an extraordinary dream. In this he makes reference to us personally. One of our readers' ambitions is some day to be able to have enough gathered together so that we can go out and buy what it is like to be extravagant. -Detroit Free Press

Origin of Slang Term. "Chaff." - A slang phrase, referring to the throwing of chaff in front of birds, so that they will not follow, and consequently we get the phrase an old bird is not caught with chaff, that is a wise man, with all his wits about him, is not to be deluded by humbug. But "you are chaffing me," springs from an entirely different source. Here the reference is to the French word chautier, to cook, chaff to cook, -The English expression still surviving in the phrase "chaff" a person, which does not necessarily mean to mock him, although he may become teased.

How Man Spends His Time. A French statistician has been dabbling with figures to find out just what man does with that precious thing called time. He concludes that at the age of 60 years the average man has slept 6,000 days, worked 4,500, walked 900, smoked himself 4,000, spent 500 eating, and was ill 500 days.

PULLING HAIR IS CAVE MAN SIGN OF LOVE, SAYS IDE

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 15.-When a school boy pulls the hair of a girl sitting in front of him it is a cave man sign that he loves the young lady.

This is the conclusion of the physicist of the Philadelphia public school, Miss Gladys G. Ide, director of special education. "Manifestations of early love are found in the kindergarten, and are common enough through school life," said Miss Ide.

The scuffling and sweating, the twitching of hair braids, placing of pins in advantageous positions and many of the other smaller annoyances which cause friction between teacher and pupil are direct evidences of favor from one person to another. "The ways of a young man of love with a maid are many and varied, from the placing of himself in perilous positions in emulation of deeds of valor, to the writing of notes and the drawing of pictures."

Color Affected by Light

The colors of most goods are more or less fugitive. That is, under certain circumstances they are liable to fade. This is true of many goods, but one of the most common is the color of the hair. The color of the hair is affected by light, and at the end of two years there will be a distinct difference between them. The one that has been exposed to the light will be decidedly paler than the other. Similar results may be obtained with both synthetic and natural dyes. The color of the hair is affected by light, and at the end of two years there will be a distinct difference between them.

MATHEMATICAL MYSTERY

A complete proof of the theory that the number of prime numbers is infinite is given in the present issue of the Journal of the American Mathematical Society. The proof is due to the late mathematician, P. L. Chebyshev, and is one of the most important results in the theory of numbers. It is a complete proof of the theory that the number of prime numbers is infinite, and is one of the most important results in the theory of numbers.
