and go with the wife. You will see a show that is different and one you will enjoy.

The Roosevelt highway legislation scored its victory in the senate for the reason that the coast country and Eastern Oregon have found a common ground to unite on many matters. There was no blow dealt at the Highway Commission as has been reported. The Senate does not wish to dictate to the commission, but it does thoroughly understand that enormous sums of money have been spent paving mountain sides in southern Oregon when gravel roads would have been better and with that money spent for paving the coast could have had more road work and Eastern Oregon's roads would have been much further along.

Again we say it is no reflection on the present commission for no member of the present commission was a member when this paving was done.

The senate desired in its vote to impress the need of improvement of the main highways of the state.

Fish and game legislation will row be on, so watch the row.

No Fox, No Rabbits.

Foxes have figured in the fables of every race of men on earth since the dawn of history, writes Dr. R. W. Shufeldt in the American Forestry Magazine. Take what the fox did out of the fables of Aesop and other writers of fables and their work would be robbed of four-fifths their interest.

Chinese Deeds and Leases.

It is reported that Chinese property deeds or leases often have 100 signatures. The reason is that land is often owned by syndicates and agreements must be signed by every member of an organization.

Before and After.

HOG-PROOF GATE IS HANDY ARRANGEMENT

Cattle and Horses Permitted to Pass at Will.

Two Low Fences, About 18 Inches High, Serve to Keep Swine in Their Own Pasture—Other Animals Can Stop Over.

A farmer uses this arrangement to keep the hogs in one lot, while allowing his cattle and horses to pass unobstructed into another pasture. The gate was removed from the hedges, and the space from post to post was boarded up solidly to a height of 18 inches from the ground. About 18 inches from each gatepost, inside the lot where the hogs were confined, a short post was driven. Long boards nailed from one to the other of these posts, made another part of board fence, 18 inches high and parallel with the boarded-up gate, with an 18-inch space between the two low walls. When a hog comes to this detached panel, it will go to the end and pass round into the narrow passage between the two board walls, continuing on through and out at the other end till it tires of the performance. One that is short enough to turn in the 18-inch passage is too small to jump or climb over the boards before it, and one that cannot turn is unable to face the wall and make the attempt to climb.

All other stock, except small calves or colts, will step over the low walls. No wide cracks, offering footholds, should be left between the boards.—H. F. Greenstead, Columbia, Mo., in Popular Mechanics Magazine.

FARM SELECTION PERPLEXING

Study of Several Intricate Points Called For—Knowledge of Basic Principles Needed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In choosing a farm one has the option of buying with the intention of operating the place as his entire business, buying a small farm and renting enough additional land to meet his needs, or renting a farm either on the share or cash basis. One's choice in the matter is usually determined by the funds available.

If one has only a small amount of capital and wishes to undertake farming as a business from which to derive his entire income, he should, in nearly all cases, begin as a renter. However, if he wishes to buy a farm on which to live, deriving a part of his income from other sources, then, possibly, purchasing is desirable, even if capital is limited.

Whatever course is followed, it is highly desirable that one thoroughly understand the basic principles governing the farm business before deciding some of the finer points. A disregard of these basic principles is responsible for a large proportion of farm failures.

A man may unconsciously work all his life against some economic barrier when success would have been comparatively easy if he had selected a farm where the economic principle would aid him instead of working against him.

War-Destroyed French Railroads, All Restored

EVERY mile of the 1800 miles of French railroads destroyed during the war has been restored. This is perhaps one of the most remarkable accomplishments in the whole story of French reconstruction. Daily car loadings of French railroads have increased from an average of 20,000 cars a day in May to 30,000 a day in the Autumn months. The rehabilitation of the railroads has been aided by the rapid restoration of France's steel industry. Out of 50 blast furnaces destroyed, 37 have been rebuilt, and of 834 metal working plants 735 have resumed production. Sixty-two per cent of the copper and bronze factories damaged or destroyed are working to full or partial capacity.
