ESSENTIAL THAT CROPS FIT SOIL

Red Clover and Timothy Should Not Be Depended On Exclusively for Maximum Crops.

REDTOP FAVORS MOIST GROUND

No Perennial Hay Plants Will Produce
Well on Poor, Sandy Soil—Most Grass Seeds Are Small and Require Good Seedbed.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

While timothy and red clover undoubtedly are the best hay crops on good soils in the northeastern quarter of the United States, they should by no means be depended on to produce maximum yields of soils. Other hay crops are better suited and are more dependable in some cases and under particular soil conditions. Alsike clover, for example, is better adapted to sour and moist soils than common red clover, and the two mixed together and seeded on some uplands often insure a crop where the latter seeded alone would fail. Redtop is the best wet-land grass and on such land a mixture of redtop meadow fescue, and alsike clover usually gives good returns. While no hay grasses can be depended upon to make a commercial crop on poor land, redtop, orchard grass, and tall oats-grass are better than any others. These are facts discussed in detail in Farmers' Bulletin No. 1170, Meadows for the Northern States, just issued and ready for distribution by the United States Department of Agriculture.

Has Bulk of Tame Hay Acreage.
In that section of the United States, north of and including Tennessee, and east of central Nebraska, Kansas and the Dakotas, is found 83 per cent of the tame hay acreage of the nation. Eighty-eight per cent of this acreage is seeded to timothy and clover. While these two plants undoubtedly will continue to hold the popularity they now possess, there are a number of other plants which, though not so well known, are more desirable for particular purposes and for certain conditions of soil and climate. The latter are given special attention in the bulletin.

Field of Bur Clover.

There is little difference of opinion as to the plants to be seeded on rich well-drained land. Timothy is seeded alone at the hay is to be sold on the market, and timothy and clover, often mixed with redtop, where part or all of the hay is utilized on the farm. Some of the advantages of these plants are that they have good seed habits, especially timothy and redtop. Red clover is a deep-rooted legume, and has a beneficial effect on succeeding crops.

Timothy is considered by feeders the best hay for horses, and clover, or clover and timothy mixed, produce better yields and are excellent for cattle and sheep. The comparatively long period during which these plants may be left standing without serious deterioration before cutting, together with the fact that the time of their maturity interferes little with the harvesting of the cereals and other farm work, have much to do with their popularity.

The most serious objection to the red clover and timothy mixture is due to the difference in time of their maturity. The former usually being ready to cut two weeks before the latter. For this reason mammoth clover, a variety of the common red, which is somewhat later in maturing, is sometimes substituted for red clover in the seed mixture.

There are many soils along the southern border of the area under discussion which will give a larger hay yield if seeded to orchard grass, tall oats-grass, and alsike clover than if seeded to timothy, redtop and red clover. These soils are usually poor in organic matter and are inclined to be sour. It is important that this mixture be cut when the plants first head out, for if harvesting is delayed they will make a tough, less palatable hay. This is especially true of orchard grass. If cut early, however, this hay will be relished by all classes of live stock. For general use in the localities referred to, the bulletin recommends the following mixture: Orchard grass, 14 pounds; tall oats-grass, 12 pounds; alsike clover, 6 pounds per acre.

Raising hay on poor land is not satisfactory.

Substitute for Grass.

A new substitute for grass or a hay crop has been suggested in Germany. It can be cut with shears or with a knife and, when heated to near boiling, 100 degrees Centigrade, it forms a kneadable mass which becomes its previous hard state on cooling. It is

HE HAS NEVER FELT BETTER

Portland Man Had Been In Poor
Health For Years Before Taking Tanlac.

"I took Tanlac because I heard others praising it," said Ethos B. Marvin, 1733 Portsmouth Ave., Portland, Ore., "and now I am praising it myself because of what it has done for me."

"For several years I was in a poor state of health and never felt right. My stomach and liver were badly out of order. I had no appetite and suffered constantly from indigestion. If I ventured to eat a hearty meal I was in perfect misery for hours afterwards. I felt completely used up all the time and it was a drag for me to get through my work."

"But I hadn't finished my first bottle of Tanlac before I saw I had found the right medicine at last, and now I am sound and well. In fact, I never felt better in my life. My appetite is fine, my digestion seems to be perfect and I have gained considerably in weight. All of my ailments are gone. I am just in the pink of condition and can do as big a day's work as any man. I never lose a chance to recommend Tanlac."

SEVEN WEEKS OF SCHOOL REMAIN

ALLICE, Apr. 9.—(Special)—Mr. and Mrs. Otis Buchanan of Idaho are visiting at the home of Will Buchanan. They plan to motor back V. E. Randall, wife and son, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Brown, all of La Grande, spent the week end in Allice.

Misses Margaret and Mary Taylor spent Wednesday in Imbler as guests of Mrs. Pratt.

Mrs. J. B. Plass of Wallawa spent a short time at the home of Mrs. R. C. Plass last week.

Pupils of the Allice school are rejoicing over the fact that there are only seven weeks of school work ahead of them. Pupils of the primary grades are already at work on the closing program.

Miss Ruth Johnson was a La Grande visitor this week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Wright have arrived from Portland to spend the summer. They say they are glad to leave the rain and get back to the Grande Ronde Valley. However, they didn't expect to find snow.

HOBBOES HATE CHAIN GANG

PICK AND SHOVEL IN PLACE OF FINES.

Necessity of Working Out Fines Here
Serves to Keep Undesirable Element Away.

Among the pentry that makes its living off the fat of the land, "moehing" the price of a meal whenever possible and resorting to all sorts of mean means of keeping from doing an honest day's work, La Grande is fast losing its reputation of being a city of generous folks.

During the winter they huddle together in the cities and when spring-time comes they spread broadcast through the country. As flies swarm around things sticky and sweet, so the non-workers of the human race swarm to places where the police sleep and where the "moehing" is good.

Those coming here find that they have tasted of the wrong ointment when they try to live off the people of La Grande. The local police are ever on the lookout for them and the laws of the city provide ample opportunity to impose fines for misdemeanors.

Once a fine is imposed the prisoner who hates work may harbor a delusion that he can eat and sleep in the city jail and continue in idleness until the law is satisfied. However, that is not the case, for there's a chain gang that works with pick and shovel and all the prisoner gets out of it is a credit of $2 a day on his fine and three meals a day. Consequently the ex-members of the chain gang leave La Grande and give her a black-eye among their own kind.

Today the chain gang has dwindled down to a lone negro convicted of having embraced too much moonshine. Three prisoners, who were working last week, finished their time Saturday night and left town, intending to put their friends in other places next to the inhospitality of La Grande.

Absolutely Not Guilty.

Little Billy had been sent to his aunt's on an errand and told to return immediately. Billy remained one hour. On his return his mother said: "Billy, what is your object in staying at aunt's when I told you to come right back?" Billy replied: "Object, what do you mean object, why, I never even took it with me. I left it home in my tool box."

Pictures of Christ.

Pictures of Christ represent the artists' imaginative conceptions, based more or less on Biblical and other descriptions of His personal appearance. The works of Leonardo da Vinci and Raphael, which are the earliest accepted ones and from which nearly all others have been imitated to some extent, are said to be reproductions of the traditional likeness furnished after the Greek model of the late-god Apollo, of the Egyptian Serapis.
