Simple Funeral Arrangements

Except in the case of a public citizen, a distinguished member of society, or a person with a wide circle of intimate friends, preference is now shown for the home service, unless religious sentiment makes it necessary to hold one at the church. At the home service, pall-bearers are not appointed, nor are they usually nowadays for the church service. Should they be, six or eight men are selected to do honor at the funeral of a grown person, man or woman, and walk just before the casket as it is carried into the church. For a young woman or or very young man, this guard is appointed from the most fortunate man friends of the deceased. It is never good taste to appoint relatives for pall-bearers.

The pall-bearers are asked to assemble at the house, drive thence to the church and, after the service at the church, they quietly disperse, and do not officiate at the cemetery. The carriages provided for them do not call for them individually at their houses. Instead, when the request for service is made, the hour is explicitly given at which the funeral cortege will assemble before proceeding to the church, and when all is in readiness the pall-bearers are shown to the carriages before the door that have been provided for them.

The Bookworm

(Mary A. Nichols, County Librarian.) Frederick O'Brien, author of "White Shadows in the South Seas" is keeping away from Tahiti. A payment of 110,000 francs plus a goodly sum of legal costs to avenge the wounded feelings of Capt. Joe Winchester, a schooner skipper, awaits him there. The Captain took to heart Mr. O'Brien's lively description of a person called "Lying Bill Pincher" in the second chapter of "White Shadows in the South Seas" that he had paper-served on him. Mr. O'Brien, who was in Tahiti collecting material for another volume, left the case in the hands of a French lawyer and speedily decamped. A full length portrait of Lying Bill Pincher is said to grace his new book.

Recent statistics compiled by the Publishers' Weekly show that for almost three years a book by Eleanor H. Porter of "Pollyanna" (fame has held every month a place as one of the best sellers. No other author has approached this record in a survey of the 25 years those statistics cover.

Zona Gale has returned to her home in Portage, Wis. after a winter in New York overseeing the dramatization of her novel "Miss Lulu Bett." This book and "Main Street" by Sinclair Lewis are pronounced the outstanding novels of the year.

It is interesting to note that the Pacific coast is very much in the lead in the per capita circulation of the books in the public libraries of the 30 largest cities in the U.

S. Portland reports 5.22 books per capita; Seattle follows with 5. Los Angeles with 4.85 and Cleveland, Ohio, with 4.35. La Grande's per capita report for 1920 is 4.27.
