Better than Pills

YOU WILL NEVER wish to take another dose of pills after having once used Chamberlain's Tablets. They are easier and more pleasant to take, more gentle and mild in their action and more reliable. They leave the bowels in a natural condition, while the use of pills is often followed by severe constipation, requiring a constant increase in the dose. Every bottle guaranteed by your druggist.

AMENDMENT TO CHARTER

such officer, by the city recorder, this being in line with the work these officers do. This section is also to be made to conform to the Bancroft bonding act, providing for the payment of assessments in ten annual installments.

Interest Rate Higher

Amendments to Section 4 and 4a, changing the limit of interest on general bonds from five per cent to six per cent. This also includes the interest on funding bonds.

Amendment to Section 2, Chapter 6, making the term of office of city commissioner four years. Under this proposed amendment two commissioners would be elected at the next general election to serve four years and the term of Commissioner David I. Stoddard would be extended to four years from January 1, 1921.

Election Law Changes

Amendment to Section 1, Chapter 2, making the general election conform to the state law, that is, once every two years.

Sections 6 and 7: Making the city charter conform to the state law in regard to registration of voters, time of voting and election of judges.

Amendment to Section 32a, Chapter 6, regarding giving of notice in the case of minor sidewalk liens, the present system being considered cumbersome.

Amendment to Section 7, Chapter 6: This amendment deals with the regulations regarding the manufacture of spirituous liquor and makes more definite the provision regarding possession and authorizes the issuance of search warrants by the city court where reasonable belief exists that possession will be proved by execution of a search warrant.

WANT JONES ACT TO BE ENFORCED

has a personal familiarity with it, he has not yet found time to do any of the things the act required of the president.

There is a disposition among the president's former colleagues on the senate committee on commerce which disposition is reflected in the house committee, to be patient with him, in the realization that he has a multitude of things to do. Nevertheless the feeling grows that patience is ceasing to be a virtue.

The American merchant marine is in an exceedingly bad way. The skeleton shipping board organization, carried over from the previous administration, is functioning only nominally. Private ships and shipping board ships are being driven into retirement, and hundreds of young Americans who had hopefully begun maritime careers, are back on shore hunting land jobs.

More Help Needed.

All that remains of a splendid beginning in the sea trade is a gigantic obligation on the public treasury, a tale of government inefficiency and waste in management and the foundation of a series of scandals.

The application of the Jones act cannot cure all the ills and cannot over night put the merchant marine on its feet. It can, however, do a great deal in that direction and the delay in applying it causes the situation to become worse every day.

If President Harding believes, as President Wilson did, that the discriminatory provisions in the act are unwise and unwholesome, he should, his former colleagues hold, say so and give congress a chance to offer something else. No member of either committee will permit himself to be quoted at this time, but privately a number of them urge a public agitation of the subject as a means of getting the matter to the president's attention.

Show Down Wanted

What the senators and representatives want is an early appointment of the shipping board and an early application of the provisions of the Jones act, failing that they want a resolution from the White House of objections, if any there be, to this legislation.

A movement is now a foot in progress for the adoption of a joint resolution calling on the president for his reasons for not acting, unless he decides very soon that he is to do something.

He has taken action in his public utterances to commit himself to the principle of upholding the merchant marine, but his own friends in congress complain bitterly of his non-action.

J. MCNAMARA IS RELEASED FROM PRISON

The McNamaras were arrested in the east after Orville E. McManigal, an alleged accomplice, made a confession. McManigal was the principal witness at the trial, which came to a dramatic end when the accused men offered to make pleas of guilty if assured they would escape the death penalty.

Two other alleged accomplices were arrested and received prison sentences in California. Thirty-nine other persons who had been associated with the McNamaras in Indiana, were convicted of conspiring to transport dynamite, in the Federal court at Indianapolis. These cases followed statements by McManigal to the effect that there had been a country-wide dynamiting of bridges and other structures on which non-union workers had been employed.

Remaining indictments against John McNamara in Los Angeles have been outlived, but it was said here he might possibly have to face charges in Indianapolis upon his release.
