The Milk Goat Industry

BY LAWRENCE G. HILL.

Milk Goat Products.

When making goat milk cheese on a small scale it will be good to follow the rules below.

A boiler thoroughly cleaned will serve the purpose. Put into it four gallons of sweet goat milk and one pint of "clean flavored" sour milk for a starter. Then heat the milk to about 80 degrees and add one tablet of rennet. The milk coagulates in less than 15 minutes.

Drain off the whey and put the curd into a flour sack to drip. After draining for six hours it is laid between a couple of clean boards, sack and all, with a rock for a weight and left till morning.

It is then placed in a granite kettle, broken up, salted (two teaspoonsful—not heaping) and crushed with the clenched fist, turning repeatedly and working and kneading until it is an even mixture and free from lumps.

Then it is put into the press. A press is made of a three-pound coffee can. With a pair of snips cut both ends even. Use a tin bucket cover a little larger than the coffee can in circumference; punch holes in it with a nail, driving the nail from the inside so that the rough edges project outward and support the press, thus leaving room for the whey to escape and drain down the board. The board upon which the press rests has grooves cut so the escaping whey will run to one point at the end of the board.

The press should be lined with cheesecloth before putting the curd into it. Then, as the curd is pressed down firmly into it, the cloth should be drawn to work out the wrinkles, as the smoother the cheese the less danger of mold. Then fold the end of the cloth smoothly over the cheese.

A "follower" is then needed. This can be had by using a lid of a baking powder can. A stone large enough for the required pressure would not go down into the mold, so use a tomato can to set the "follower" upon, and on top of this place the rock weight, this being about twice the size of a person's head.

To turn the cheese, simply turn the cylinder that contains it upside down, reversing the "follower" and the perforated draining lid. The cheese is kept in the press about 12 days. It is turned twice a day to insure even mellowing of curd. And in eight to twelve days it is given a coat of paraffin after the cloth is removed. This process is sanitary and a good method.

First, one must have good, clean milk. This means a clean milking stand, washing the goats' udders before milking. The utensils are all washed, first with cold water, then scalding hot water with Citric washing powder, then with scalding water and soda. Do not dry or wipe with cloth, but let them drain dry. Towels are very unsanitary; to surround milk, so do not wipe with your hands.

Before crushing the curd, wash the hands. They are washed in water so hot as a person can stand and then dipped into a water.

One must realize in making cheese that they are face to face with an enemy for capable of raving an army of its millions with lightning rapidity and so, if we are too timid, or indifferent to regard every little detail of cleanliness, we would better not make cheese. Cheese making is an industry that must always be sanitary in every respect or everything is a sweet, light texture cheese is lost.

BIRTHDAY IS CELEBRATED

GRANGE HALL, May 12—(Special.)—Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Will Gekeker drove to Union, where they spent the day with their daughter, Mrs. Victor Ragain.

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Anson and Mrs. C. E. Golden and daughter, Faye, spent Sunday evening at the Wm. Taylor home.

Wednesday, May 11, Grandma Gekeker passed her 81st milestone. In the afternoon she received several callers. Considering her age, Mrs. Gekeker's health is quite good. She owes the health she enjoys to her active life. Although she makes no visits away from home, her happiness lies in helping others in all the ways possible from her own home. Friends, neighbors or relatives seldom leave without taking with them something to make them happier—sometimes a bouquet of her beautiful flowers, or, perhaps, a basket of fresh fruit. Mrs. Gekeker is always ready to help in good cause financially. She loves to make the kiddies happy. She knows that every child has a sweet tooth and in her pantry she keeps a supply of cookies, candies or fresh fruits. Someone has said that a woman's life is divided into three parts—the first twenty years belong to herself, her education, etc.; the next twenty years to the rearing of her family, and the remainder of her life to the good she can do for others, and Mrs. Gekeker has lived up to this standard.

"TREE OF KNOWLEDGE" AT SHERRYS TODAY

Major Robert Warwick, who fought bravely against the Hun during the war, succumbs quite early to woman's wiles in his new picture, "The Tree of Knowledge," which shows at Sherrys today.

The soldier-star has the role of a young Englishman, studying for the ministry, who falls under the influence of a female adventurer. After she has deserted him for another, he becomes manager of his best friend's estate.

Also showing a comedy—MUD and JOE.

NEAL HART IN "SKYFIRE" AT SHERRYS SUNDAY

The aura borealis, which has hitherto defied successful photography, has been woven into the plot of a photoplay.

The picture is called "Skyfire" with Neal Hart, known as "America's Pal," for its star, and will be shown at Sherrys' Sunday and Monday.

LARRY SEMON, WORLD'S FUN MAKER, HERE ON SUNDAY AND MONDAY

One of the funniest situations in "The High," a Larry Semon comedy in two reels, shown Sunday and Monday at Sherrys is provoked by a box of stuff dropped by a quaint character in a massive restaurant scene.

HERBERT'S GREATER MINSTRELS COMING TO ARCADE THEATRE

The largest minstrel company of real negro talent ever organized will be the attraction at the Arcade Theatre Tuesday night. With the appearance of this company at the Star of the Arcade Theatre will have a chance to see 90 premiums of genuine zero minstrelsy.

"FOR PETE'S SAKE" SHOWN AT THE STAR

Jimmie Page, hero and scapegoat of a hundred escapades, said good-bye to his New York haunts and headed west in search of hair-braids and adventure, in "Stam-Bang Jim," the happy, script William Russell comedy drama which is being shown today and Sunday at the Star.

Because he looked like the very twin brother of one Arizona Pete, wanted by the authorities for an assortment of misdeeds, the sheriff laid official hold of Jim and established him as a star boarder in the local jail.

Then begins a series of stirring, red-blooded adventure.

OTIS SKINNER WINS AGAIN IN "KISMET"

"Kismet," with the intangible Otis Skinner, a Robertson-Gale release, which was shown last night at the Arcade Theatre, is the greatest photo-play of a decade. As the masterpiece of Edward Knobloch, the film version of this famous drama has fast none of its essential "zip" needed to make it the great success on the screen that it was on the legitimate stage.

In the first place the combination of Otis Skinner and "Kismet" assures the movie fan of something worth while. Here is a real story, written by an American dramatist, in which the greatest of American character actors appears.

"Kismet" will be shown for the last time tonight at the Arcade Theatre.

Worth Trying, Anyway.

Honestly, in looking around we reach the conclusion that this country wouldn't need one-tenth of the liver medicine it consumes if the folks always made it a point to do a decent day's work.—Exchange.

WE KNOW---

WE GIVE OUR CUSTOMERS THE BEST GROCERIES AND THE MOST-USELESS THAN IS OBTAINABLE FROM ANY OTHER SOURCE—AND WE WANT YOU TO KNOW IT.

We not only make these assertions, but we back them up. We will donate $50.00 to any institution named by the party who will bring us an order from any mail order house that is within 10 per cent off our lowest grocery prices on high grade goods. It might seem to you that we wouldn't make this offer unless we were sure—that is just so—we know there is no mail order concern in the Northwest that equals our prices on quality groceries.

We caution the people of this community to beware of smooth salesmen—who misrepresent and sell inferior and unknown brands—and then tell you it is just as good as well known brands you have been using. During the past few days we have had a number of people tell us that they have purchased from out-of-town mail order houses to their sorrow—that they had paid more for their goods, but received after considerable delay goods of inferior quality and other articles that were unfit to use—and still others that they were absolutely worthless. Beware of those salesmen who call once and never return to make good their false promises! Beware of those who use bait to catch the unsuspecting. He who sells one item at half price and then charges two prices for a cheap, inferior atom baking powder—which he will tell you is just as good as Schilling's, a high grade baking powder—is one who holds no place in the public's confidence. These are the standard retail experiences as told to us by several of our Grande citizens who know what they are using.

SAFETY FIRST
Get your groceries where you get a guarantee that no mail order house gives—where the quality of the goods are guaranteed and always exact—where the price has never been equaled.
