Grown from seed as a zinnia or sweet alyssum. The blossoms should be cut when half open, suspended head downward until dry, and may then be made into bouquets which will last indefinitely and lose none of their brilliancy of color.

It would seem that all there was left to be invented in the tomato line would be a worthless one, but this year two distinct novelties are offered, the most striking of which is a white tomato. It is the counterpart in all respects of the ordinary tomato except its color, which is a brilliant cream white. John Haer seems the most striking of the new red varieties because of the profusion of its yield and the uniformity of the fruits which are of the round sadad variety. It is not quite so early as Earliana, but a much heavier bearer. It will be found a winner.

This is a rheumatism of the muscles of the back. It comes on suddenly and is quite painful. Every movement aggravates the disease. Go to bed, keep quiet and have Chamberlain's Liniment applied and a quick recovery may be expected. Mrs. F. J. Dann, Brockport, N. Y., writes: "I can honestly say that Chamberlain's Liniment cured me of lumbago a year ago last summer. When I began using it, I was flat on my back in bed and could not turn to the left or right. I had a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment in the house and this was applied to my back. It promptly drove away the pains and aches."—adv.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Johnson Are Always Telling Their Friends About Good Tanlac Did Them

"It is hard to tell who thinks most of Tanlac, my wife or myself," writes C. L. Johnson, a farmer living on R. F. D. No. 1, Box 72, Troutdale, Ore.

"For nearly two years I had trouble with my stomach and kidneys. Gas seemed to star on my stomach all the time, and often I felt like a deep breath would kill me. My back was weak and lame and hurt so it was all I could do to get up out of a chair. I suffered from headaches and dizziness and could hardly walk a step. My sleep was all broken up at night and it took all my grit and nerve to stay on my job during the day.

"But four bottles of Tanlac put me back in as fine health as I ever enjoyed in my life. My appetite has come back and what I eat agrees with me. My kidneys and back don't bother me any more and those headaches and dizzy spells have all gone. I sleep well and am putting in full time at work every day.

My wife was troubled with chronic indigestion and she suffered with sick headaches and complained of being all run down and tired out. Tanlac has done her just as much good as it has me, and now she says she is feeling better than in a long time. We both think the world of Tanlac and are telling all our friends about it."—Adv.

The hedgehog, on going to sleep for the winter, first rolls about in leafy ditches, until his spines have spread leaves enough to make him a warm blanket. Then he finds a snug retreat in the roots of an old tree, curls up, and snoozes until spring.

THE HOME GARDEN

What is Home without a Garden?

Why Won't the Plant Lay

Many gardeners have trouble with egg plants and find they do not get enough "eggs" to pay for the room these plants occupy in the garden, particularly if it is of small dimensions. There is one cause right at the start of the egg plant's career that may cause it to lay off laying. If it suffers a check in growth and the young plants are allowed to wilt there will be a deficit in eggs.

The young plants should be transplanted early, preferably into small pots or at least sufficiently far apart in boxes so that they can be transplanted with a good ball of earth and the least disturbance of the roots when moved to permanent quarters.

Another reason why they won't egg as they should is that too often they are planted too thickly in the hotbed or seed box and the plants crowd each other before they are transplanted. In this case the stem hardens and the egg crop is diminished.

The egg plant does not need or like too wet a soil. In fact, it does not like as cool a soil as peas or beans. Very often one big egg seems to use up the plant's effort. The first egg should not be allowed to become too large before it is gathered. They are ready to use when one-third grown and taking the first one a little early

Everlasting Flowers

Florists' windows all winter have been gay with an old-fashioned annual in several varieties which was popular in the days of our great-grandmothers who always had bouquets of them for the winter—the everlasting flowers. Two varieties have been displayed more than others, the heliotropium and the dianthus. The former has a long line of bronze, maroon and yellow shades. The latter is the most dainty and delicate of all the everlasting or straw flowers. It is often grown as a pot plant. Its flowers are nodding and a delicate rose pink. All these are as easily

CARPENTIER'S CAREER—HOW PIT BOY IN MINE ROSE TO FAME WITH HIS FISTS

Georges Carpentier has come to the United States from France to fight Jack Dempsey for the heavyweight title less is known than any fighter who ever went into a world championship fight. Cochran, in this story of Carpentier's life written for the La Grande Evening Observer, tells of the struggles of the one-time mine pit boy in rising to the light-heavyweight championship of the world.

BY HAL COCHRAN.

CHAPTER I

Fifteen years ago Georges Carpentier, at the age of 12, was pit boy in a coal mine in Lens, France. That little obscure mining town had been the scene of his childhood play days and of his early schooling.

He was born of poor parents and as soon as he was old enough, joined his father, a miner, in daily trips to the insides of the earth. The youth's weekly earnings went to help keep the wolf from the Carpentier door.

In those days Georges was a timid-looking, fair-haired youth, with an appearance far from that of a lad who would indulge in anything that required muscle and brawn. He was generally looked upon as a fireless mother's boy.

Working in darkness all day long, away from sunshine and open air, didn't appeal to Georges. He wanted to do something else. With that thought ever on his mind, he occasionally went, after working hours, to himself and mix in the sparring and a boxing school that had been opened in the town by a Prof. Francois Descamps.

GEORGES CARPENTIER'S FIGHTING FACE. ABOVE ARE FRANCIS DESCAMPS, HIS MANAGER, AND MME. VANHILBROUCK, DESCAMPS' MOTHER-IN-LAW, WHO HAS KEPT AN EYE ON GEORGES SINCE HE WAS A SMALL BOY.

One night he gave a much bigger fellow a good drubbing. Descamps witnessed the bout and was much impressed with the fair-haired kid's showing. Georges was encouraged to come to the school more regularly. Eventually the professor had a hunch these were something that goes to make real battlers in the kid—at least a lot of nerve.

Descamps took the matter up with Carpentier's parents. He wanted to take their son under his wing and train him. At first there was much objection, but Descamps' persistency won out and Georges left his pit-boy task for all time.

Outside battles, with a money angle to them, however, were few and far between. And money talked mightily loud with Descamps and his youthful pupil.

Hence they went on little tours and Carpentier staged exhibition bouts in cafes at night. Let Georges tell you about it himself:

"First we staged a fight; then followed with an acrobatic turn. As a grand finale I allowed myself to be sent into a trance by Descamps and did 'thought reading'."

The year 1908 took him into the ring with men who had gained real reputations.

(The next story carries Carpentier through his first knockout and one of the longest battles he has ever fought in.)
