THE DALLES, June 7.—The Dalles is mourning today the passing of three people prominent in the life of the city, all of whom died in the early hours Saturday.

Mrs. Sarah Davidson Klein, 66 years old, a pioneer of 1854, and Mrs. Roanna Kelly Brown, "god-mother" of the boys of the fire department, died at the hospital.

Wilson J. Manchester, former proprietor of the Manchester mill on upper Five Mile creek, and manager at the time of his death, of a stage line running to Dufur, died at his home about 9 o'clock, following a sudden illness which only became manifest Thursday. He was 64 years old.

Mrs. Sarah Davidson Klein was one of the few remaining pioneers of Wasco county, having lived in the county the greater part of her life.

She was born somewhere between Baker and La Grande, in one of the first immigrant trains to come across the old immigrant trail. Her mother died at the time and was buried in a shallow grave by the wayside. She was cared for by her grandmother during the remainder of the trip, until the wagon train reached Portland.

After living with relatives in the Willamette Valley for a short time, the young girl, Sarah Davidson, was brought to the Dalles, where she lived with an aunt, Mrs. R. Rindlaub, until 1859, when she was married to Sam Klein, also a pioneer of Wasco county.

Mrs. Lulu D. Crandall, who went to school in the Dalles with Sarah Davidson, tells of an incident in the school room at the time of her marriage to Klein.

"All of the pupils were assembled in the school room and the teacher was calling the morning roll," Mrs. Crandall explained. "When the name of 'Sarah Davidson' was called no one answered."

"Finally a small hand shot up in a far corner of the room; 'Please, teacher, Sarah got married yesterday and won't be to school today,' a little girl explained. Sarah Davidson was only 15 years old at the time.

She is survived by her husband, who is now 83 years old, and one son, Frank.

Universal Reason.
She was old and gray and was fishing in a little pond near her house. I asked: "Well, Auntie, what are you catching?" She said: "I ain't catching nothing, 'tain't nothing in yer to catch." "What are you fishing for?" I asked. She said: "I care hit's handy."—WYOMING (APK.) Progress.

PORTLAND, June 7.—E. J. Stack has been elected organizer for the state federation of labor, Secretary Kinsey has announced. He will carry on the work provided under the 7 cents annual per capita tax voted at the convention federation in Pendleton.

PORTLAND, June 7.—A drop in the Snake river and a small rise in the Upper Columbia have caused the weather bureau to predict that the Willamette river will be nearly stationary on Friday with a 24.6 foot stage Thursday. The stage here today is 3.3 feet.

PORTLAND, June 7.—The appropriation of $111,000,000 for the shipping board in the deficiency appropriation bill was cut to $61,000,000 by the senate and house conferees, the latter refusing to agree to the senate decrease of $50,000,000.

BAKER, June 7.—C. P. Ragsdale, who held the largest wool clip of last year and this year in this section of the state, approximately 270,000 pounds, has disposed of it to the Portland Wool Warehouse company of Portland, receiving 16 cents per pound.

The clip was of the finest quality. This sale is the only one that has taken place in this county this spring and there remains a million and a half pounds in the hands of the producers awaiting the hope of a better price that has been offered.

Tens of Dollars.
The perfume manufacturer has made 100 tons of orange blossoms, 200 tons of roses, 15 tons of lavender and violet and 15 tons of jessamine.

It's A Pleasure To See Such Bread

as ours. The generously big loaf the fine golden brown crust, the snowy whiteness of the soft part all appeal to the eye. But it's in the eating that our bread most excels. A taste of it is a revelation of how good bread can be. Try a loaf and enjoy learning for yourself. It is but dough, not bread dough.
