STUDENTS WORK FOR SCHOLARSHIP

The Pictorial Review this summer is promoting one of the biggest and most altruistic circulation ideas which has ever been attempted by any magazine at any time, if the local condition is to be taken as the criterion. This magazine proposes to award between 300 and 400 scholarships this summer to young college men, picked from all over the United States, who in turn, will secure Pictorial Review subscriptions. The national territory has been divided, and allotted to various students, usually four in a group. This vicinity is to be covered by Ruedford Bailey, from the University of Oregon; George Updegraff, of Oregon Agricultural College, and Kai H. Andersen, of the Utah Agricultural College. Each student in the contest has an even chance for his scholarship, it being necessary that he make a certain number of subscriptions during the eleven weeks of the contest. The students covering this territory arrived last evening, having been in the contest for the past five weeks. They plan to make this week, "Pictorial Review Week" in La Grande, and bring with them all of the necessary credentials to show that they are bona fide representatives.

Just an informal dance where shirt sleeves are in favor, that's the kind of party that's going to be held at the Country Club Wednesday evening. 7-25-21.
