Country Club Notes

High Lights About the Links, Club House and Natatorium.

Te To Be Played Off—It's just one thing after another at the Country Club these days. Now that the big tournament is over, there is a little matter to be disposed of next Sunday when the three-credited tie for the President's Cup will be played off between Claude Scriber, Norman Fosse and Earl Stoddard. These three men turned in low scores at the recent president's tournament, and the mastery will be decided next Sunday, weather permitting. Some sharp competition is anticipated.

Commercial Interests Represented—Social friendships are really the least of importance in connection with inter-city sport events such as the recent tournament here. Managers and backers of commercial enterprise become acquainted, and the business relationship between cities is always strengthened thereby. The personnel of the Boise team, for instance, demonstrates the point in mind. Out of the eight men who came from the Idaho metropolis, none had any first-hand information about La Grande, and, to say the least, they were agreeably surprised at much of what they saw in a commercial way, and they were observing, too. Some of the leading industries of Idaho were represented. Mr. McMillin is president of the Pacific National bank; Mason Youell is president of the Capital News; W. C. Schmelzel is a shoe merchant; Frank Robertson is assistant treasurer of the Idaho Power company; Chas. Miller is engineer of the same company and Glenn Hills is the same company for the concern; Mr. Scully is superintendent of building and ground of the Boise country club, and J. K. Comstock is official reporter for the Public Utilities commission. These men will naturally say some kind things about La Grande, and help put her on the map.

Coleman Will Return To O. A. C. for Winter

PORTLAND, Sept. 13.—Ralph Coleman, pitcher for the Portland Heavers, is going back to the Oregon Agricultural College and will come to Portland whenever manager Walter McCredie of the team wants to use him in a game.

Coleman's brief professional ball this year with the Heavers and local authorities convinced that he has made good. He is a graduate of O. A. C. and is track coach and general athletic expert at the Corvallis college. Coleman will leave the club on its return from the south.
