POPULAR HAROLD M'GRATH NOVEL IS COMING

"Not Guilty," the photoplay which is coming to the screen of the Arcade theatre today and tomorrow, is arousing interest among patrons of that house because many have read Harold MacGrath's thrilling novel, "Parrot & Company," from which it is adapted.

The plot is an unusual one and involves twin brothers who love the same woman and who, strange to relate, are both loved by her. One of the brothers commits a crime, turns out to be a murderer, and his twin changes identity with the guilty brother. Then events follow in rapid sequence. The innocent brother suddenly goes to India, the land of "brilliant days and purple nights" where the love, the life, the lure of the tropical east soothe the hopes and the hearts of the civilized west. Then by coincidence the girl visits India. But the path of true love, which never did run true, winds through a veritable jungle of tense situations to an amazing climax.

"NOT GUILTY" NOW AT THE ARCADE

Just suppose you had a twin brother. That while you were boys playing with firearms you accidentally shot your twin in the head and the surgeon said the wound had affected his sense of right and wrong, and later he shot a man, would you change identities with him and become an outcast, especially when you were in love with the "only" girl in the world?

Perhaps you would and then again you might not. Anyhow you cannot help following the sacrifice and subsequent thrilling adventures of Richard Dix, who plays the part of the noble brother, with breathless interest. "Not Guilty," the feature which opened at the Arcade Theatre today for a run of two days, is a Sidney A. Franklin production, presented by Albert A. Kaufman and released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc. It is a pulsating drama from the opening scene to the finish. It is not just the buttoning and unbuttoning of life but presents a drama which led one patron, as overheard, to remark: "Truth may be stranger than fiction but this photoplay is stranger than either." What he meant to express was that while "Not Guilty" was the screen version of Harold MacGrath's exciting novel, "Parrot & Company," the director had made even a better picture than the material in the novel afforded. Sylvia Breamer as Elsa Chetwood gives a pleasing performance of the girl who loved both twins and finally gave herself to the one who, in the eyes of the world, at least, was a murderer. "Not Guilty" is just the kind of drama skillfully interpreted as it is by a well-balanced cast to please the discriminating patron of the eighth Art.

"SNOWBLIND," A SHERRY'S PLEASES EVERYONE.

A rare example of artistic motion picture photography coupled with an unusually powerful and gripping story may be seen at the Sherry Theatre today only, where the Goldwyn picture, "Snowblind," by Katherine Newlin Hart, is now being shown.

This picture was directed by Reginald Barker, and contains one of the strangest love stories that have yet found their way to the screen. There is nothing of the frail maiden or the lounge lizard in "Snowblind." With such a splendid outdoor man as Russell Simpson in the leading role, one may be sure that the story revolves about elemental passions blown to their hottest flame: the love, hate and fear of a group of four people who live together in the heart of the Canadian Rockies.

Beautiful Pauline Starke was never more lovely than in her present role of a girl blinded by the snow who is taken to the home of a fugitive from the law and falls in love with him as he boasts to her of his great deeds. Gradually, as her sight returns, she realizes his wickedness and seeks the protection of the fugitive's brother. It would be unfair to tell how this triangle works out, for part of its enjoyment lies in the surprise that nature herself has stored up for the three persons involved.

"Snowblind" is an exceptional picture of strong action, splendid acting and is excellently produced. And "The Bakery," with Larry Simon.
