Jud. Tunkins.

Jud. Tunkins says early rising is not much use to the man who puts in most of the day taking naps.

The Preface.
Is a preface expensively written? No literary moral is questionable. Is the author inveterately dull? It is a kind of preparatory information, which may be very useful. It argues a deficiency of taste to turn over an elaborate preface unread; for it is the star of the author's roses, every drop distilled at an immense cost. It is the reason of the reasoning, and the fully of the foolish.—Isaac Disraeli.

Decision.
However many paths are offered, we can take but one. But when we decide upon a course it is folly to allow the mind to wander continually about the others, speculating concerning their possible advantages, and wondering whether, after all, some other way might not have been better. The real road grows more difficult by permitting power to paint the others as "shortcuts."—Exchange.
