FARM STUDENTS VISITED FAIR

Part of Elgin High School Students' Work Included a Trip to Grange Fair.

ELGIN, Oct. 11.—(Special).—Thirty members of the agricultural classes of the high school under the supervision of A. R. Wakefield attended the Grange fair at the Grange Hall east of La Grande Friday. It is one of the many field trips taken by these classes for practical instruction. It is the endeavor of Mr. Wakefield to make the study of agriculture as practical as possible and applicable to local conditions. Practical instruction is made possible by seasonal sequence—study of seeding of wheat when wheat is being seeded; through field trips to nearby farms where the actual operations are being carried on, and criticisms for improvement offered; by study of text books, reference work from books, agricultural magazines and bulletins; from colleges and experiment stations; through projects, where the student actually practices on his home farm what he has been taught. Under these methods the agricultural department is proving popular.

She lost the ball but came on down. The Imbler team was entirely new to the game and so showed a lack of experience. However, she came back hard in the second half and furnished considerably more opposition.

LUMBER BUYING IS INCREASING

Home Building Is Acting as Stimulant to Market: Prices Holding Firm.

While there has been some decrease in the total volume of orders booked, this decrease has not been sufficient to affect the strength of the market and in fact is due to some extent to the growing shortage of grades and sizes in big demand, says the weekly review of the American Lumberman, which adds: "Buying by the retail lumbermen continues fairly heavy and the industrial trade is still picking up. The volume of home building which is already under way assures the purchasing of a lot of lumber retailers this fall. Consequently the fall outlook for business is considered good."

"Prices have shown a decided firming up tendency, especially for southern pine and Douglas fir. During the last two weeks many grades of these two woods have advanced from $5 to $5 a thousand feet. A big demand for lath has developed and this item is regaining some of its lost ground. While prices still are very low they have shown some material advances."

"Retailers generally are seeking to keep their stock well assorted but as low as possible and consequently are buying in mixed cars rather than straight cars. This tendency is slowing up the volume of orders placed because in the southern pine territory, and in the Douglas fir territory, the grades and sizes in most demand are scarce and purchasers in many cases have to go from mill to mill before one can be located which will book the order."

"It is customary for the volume of a preparedness measure."

buying to be fairly heavy at this season and for lumber prices to advance under the pressure of this buying, so that the present situation is nothing unusual. Retail dealers report a great many inquiries already received for 1922 business and every indication is that the year is going to be a very active home building year; consequently all divisions of the lumber trade are optimistic."

BELIEVE IN PREPAREDNESS.

CHICAGO, Oct. 12.—Counting of the referendum ballot taken last week by the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen's union, conferring power on the executive committee to call a strike, was begun at international headquarters here. Several days will be required to complete the count.

There is no immediate intention of calling a strike, according to union officers, but the vote was designed as a preparedness measure.

PORTLAND MAN IN FINE SHAPE

Landquist Says His Only Regret About Tanlac Is He Did Not Get It Sooner.

"The only regret I have about Tanlac is that I did not get it sooner, for it certainly put me in fine shape in a very short time," said John R. Landquist, 338 East Twenty-third Street, North, Portland, Oregon.
"My trouble started with the influenza, and ever since I had it, until Tanlac, straightened me out. I was in a run-down and miserable condition. I ate hardly enough to keep a bird alive and even the small amount I did eat used to cause me hours of suffering afterwards."
"Tanlac did for me what all the other medicines failed to do and I am strong for it. It toned up my system, gave me new life and energy, and although I eat anything I want now, I never have a sign of indigestion. Tanlac is certainly in a class by itself."
"Tanlac is sold in La Grande by Silverthorn's Family Drug Store and all leading druggists.—Adv."
