RAY'S FOUR-ROUND FIGHT IS A THRILLER

"Scrap Iron," which is announced as the attraction for the Arcade Theatre for three days, beginning today, provides Charles Ray, who is started in it, with the most ambitious part he has essayed since he began his independent productions for distribution through First National. In it he enacts the role of the only support of a widowed and invalid mother, and while there is plenty of humor in it, Ray is disabused as the possessor of histrionic ability for emotional roles of unexpected power.

Steel gets the reputation of being yellow because he promises his mother to abandon his favorite sport of boxing. His refusal to fight a drunken man loses him his girl. His ambition for promotion so that he may give his mother more comforts loses him his job.

He breaks his promise when his meagre savings are gone and his mother faces starvation, by accepting the offer of a promoter of prize fights to meet the best fighter in town, who incidentally has won the girl. Steel gets 200 if he lasts three rounds with the local champion and nothing if he is knocked out before that time. The fight, one of the most realistic ever staged for a picture, goes badly for "Scrap Iron," who has eyes only on the $200 for three rounds. Then he turns his attention to fighting and the last round is a thriller.

BERT LYTELL IN "A TRIP TO PARADISE" AT SHERRY'S

This Americanized version of Frank Molnar's stage success presents Bert Lytell in one of the best roles he has had in some time. There are a good many "Curley Flyns" in every summer amusement park who make love, marry and fall into disgrace on the impulse of the moment, but who put up game fights when the situation demands it. As in the play, the satire of the

The Head of the Family

Isn't always the one who sits at the head of the table and carves the Sunday chicken.

Many times it's Mother whose clever headwork makes the family income travel just twice as far as it otherwise might.

Mother usually sees to it that the Savings Account is "paid" just as regularly as the grocery bill—so that as long as there is a family there'll be Sunday chicken to carve.

An account here ably assists the head of the family.
