Don't Become Embarrassed
 Lecturer on Social Ethics Gives Bashful Young Men Some Sound Advice.

OREGON AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CORVALLIS, Nov. 8.—The very worst thing a man can do socially, is to become embarrassed," said Miss Mary A. Roffe, dean of women, in her first lecture to men on social ethics. The large lecture room was packed—seats, aisles, windows, and doorways—and the crowd of 700 was equalled by the throng outside to gain entrance.
 "To be embarrassed is selfish because one always causes embarrassment for others in the group. Don't be full and stupid. Do things as you think they ought to be done, even though you are not sure of the methods," she said.
 Miss Roffe won the enthusiastic support of every man in the room, and when she asked if she should continue the series of lectures the "yes" could be heard from every corner of the campus. Every group in college is talking and asking about the talk today, and many women are trying to get the "inside dope."
