THE BLACK PANTHER'S CUB" MAGNIFICENT PHOTODRAMA

The ceaseless struggle of heredity versus environment enters upon an absorbing duel for the integrity of the innocent daughter of an erring mother, in the brilliant Ziegfeld production, "The Black Panther's Cub," and screen favorite, plays the double role of the "Black Panther" and her "Cub."

Adapted from the popular story by Ethel Donohue, which was suggested by Swinburne's well-known poem "Faustine," the screen version is a swiftly moving drama which unfolds amid the glittering effervescence of Parisienne cafes and gambling circles.

Florence Reed, in the final scene between mother and daughter, in which the mother dies from a shot intended for another, lifts the picture above the thrills of melodrama to the living tragedy of a life squandered past all reclaiming, in despair lest its influence fall a heritage upon innocent shoulders. Miss Reed has reached the pinnacle of her success in this difficult dual role.

A Christie comedy is also being shown.
