U. S. MAY SOON RECOGNIZE KING

Greek Publication Declares that Constantine (Will be Favored by U. S.

ATHENS, Dec. 2.—The Protevousas, organ of M. Gounaris, the Greek premier, announced recently that the United States government would soon recognize King Constantine.

The newspaper asserted that after the elections in November last, the United States government complained "that the Greek government had not announced to the White House the second advent of King Constantine to the throne."

In those days, says the Protevousas, Greece was represented in Washington by a junior and unfeeling member of the diplomatic service named M. Draxopoulos. This young diplomatist having misinterpreted the instructions of the then Prime Minister, the late M. Rhalys, briefly communicated to the American government that there was no occasion to announce the return of King Constantine to the throne, inasmuch as he had never ceased to be the lawful sovereign of Greece.

This is said here to have created the impression that the obligations assumed by Greece during the Venizelot regime would not be recognized. To eliminate this impression, the Hellenic government, categorically declared to Professor Edwards Capps, then American Minister in Athens that Greece fully recognized those obligations.

According to the explanation given here, Constantine, was, however, not recognized by the United States owing to the action of a European power which declared that if the United States government recognized Constantine that power would recognize the regime in Mexico.

However, the Protevousas says, the European power in question has now assumed a more conciliating attitude and on the other hand, relations between the United States and Mexico have appreciably improved. It is consequently, says the Premier's organ, to be expected that the Constantine question will now be settled so far as America is concerned.

It is regarded as urgent that a Greek special delegation should go to the United States since it is almost impossible for the Greek government to be in constant touch with its diplomatic representatives in Washington owing to the great distance separating the United States capital from Athens.

Umatilla at Last Decides To Grade Bad Stretch of Road

PENDLETON, Dec. 2.—Announcement was made last night that the Oregon state highway commission has agreed with the county court to let the contract for grading and graveling the last 16 miles of the Old Oregon Trail, between Dead Man's Pass and the county line at Kamela, so that work may start when weather permits.

So great has been the pressure on the state commission to finish this main trunk highway from the fact that the commission has consented to accept payment from the county for the grading in three installments of approximately $20,000 for three years. The money will be paid from the general fund of Umatilla county.

The agreement provides that the state will pay for the surfacing of the highway with gravel and it is planned at the present time to have the road complete by the winter of 1922.

Hoboes Headed For Winter Paradise

SAN FRANCISCO, Dec. 2.—Hoboes, driven by winter's cold from their summer brakebeam routes in the east, are heading for California in large numbers, according to General Manager J. H. Dyer of the Southern Pacific Railway company, which keeps a record of the number of men found riding in freight cars, on the beams and in the blind baggage.

California, in October, had 11,651 hoboes, according to the Southern Pacific figures. There were 4,856 in Arizona, 2,110 in Oregon, 1,172 in Nevada, 751 in New Mexico and 124 in Utah.

The hoboes will winter in California and then start roaming again in the spring.

TURKS KICKED OUT OF BRUSA

After Six Hundred Years Moslems Forced to Give up to Ancient Owners the Greeks.

BRUSA, Asiatic Turkey, Dec. 2.—After 600 years of Turkish occupation, Brusa is again under the dominion of its ancient owners, the Greeks. Within sight of the tombs of the first six sovereigns of the Ottoman dynasty, thousands of Greek troops are quartered, and the old capital of Byzantium has every appearance of a great modern military base.

Trade is flourishing. The hotels are crowded with business men. Living is cheap. The Greek occupation has brought about a distinct revival of local commerce.

The Turkish merchants find the Greek soldiers good customers, and they are waxing rich on them. They have also found the Greek government good buyers. Some of them have closed large contracts for the feeding and equipment of King Constantine's Anatolian army.

Others may be glad to see the Greeks go, but not Brusa's tradespeople. They have enjoyed no such prosperity in years. Brusa lies on the slopes of verdant Mount Olympus, 50 miles southeast of Constantinople. It is considered the most beautiful as well as the most healthful city in the Turkish Empire.

King Constantine of Greece selected it as his home during his recent visit to Asia Minor. It is noted for its mineral baths and its silk products.

According to popular belief, it has a mosque and a promenade for every day in the year, so that one need pray or walk in the same place only once a year.

The city's population, which numbers about 100,000, is a bewildering mixture of Asiatic and European nationalities. One sees in the public square and the narrow cobbled streets groups of commercial travelers, tourists, holy men, scholars, dervishes, janissaries, eunuchs, veiled women, princes and paupers, millionaires and mendicants, soldiers and spies.

The market-place is a babel of tongues. Gentle and Jew, Moslem and Greek, Levantine and European rub elbows and speak each other's languages. They care little whether the Greek army or the Turkish army occupies the town; they want to be left in peace and allowed to pursue their wretched callings.

The port of Brusa is Mudania, on the Sea of Marmora, an hour's ride by narrow-gauge railroad from Brusa. Mudania is an important military base for the Greeks. Scores of army transports with men, munitions and supplies arrive weekly for the Anatolian front. During the recent operations near Angora, Mudania was the main artery of supply for the Greek troops. Thousands of Greek and Armenian refugees, fearing Turkish Nationalist reprisals have sought shelter within the city of Brusa.

Aged Man Can't Break Away From His Old Habits

DUTCH FLAT, Calif., Dec. 2.—Promptly at nine o'clock each morning, John Nichols, a retired banker here, opens his place of business, spends a few minutes behind the counter as though to wait on customers, sits for a time on the front porch and then goes home.

Everything in the bank, including the scales, which have weighed millions of dollars worth of gold dust, is kept intact, but there is no money in the safe and no business is transacted.

Nichols kept his bank open for more than twenty years after the hydraulic mines closed, but finally liquidated five years ago. He came here as a youth in 1862, and for thirty years handled an average of $750,000 annually in gold dust, the depositors often refusing even to accept a receipt. After closing his bank Nichols went to the city to live, but soon returned, saying he was not content to make his home elsewhere.

BRITISHER SAIL TO BE FLOGGED

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Colonel Wedgwood, member of parliament, asked the under secretary of state for foreign affairs in the house of commons recently, whether his attention had been drawn to the flogging of Geo. Doty, a British subject at Miami, Fla. Colonel Wedgwood said that the whipping was done "presumably by the same gang that tarred and feathered the Rev. Philip S. Irwin."

Colonel Wedgwood asked also whether Doty had been forced to leave America, whether any report on this case was made by the British vice consul and what protection or prospect of protection there was for their subjects in Miami.

Cecil B. Harmsworth, the under secretary for foreign affairs, said in reply that he had no official information on the matter but would ask the British ambassador at Washington to report on it.
