REMODELING OLD BREWERY PLANT

To carry out the plans laid when it bought the old brewery building and cold storage plant from Julius Roesch, the Grande Ronde Meat company has a force of men at work excavating an addition to the basement which will house a portion of the large packing and pickling plant to be installed in the new location. For a number of years this company has had a plant of considerable size in the basement of their retail store on Adams avenue but the business outgrew this portion of the retail location. Now that the deal is closed conveying title of the old brewery property to the meat company extensive improvements will be made as the packing plant is built.
