"THE STORE WITH A CONSCIENCE"

Soft Lines Enhance Oval Face

Soft lines are the thing for the girl with the slimy oval face. Perhaps it was the consciousness of this which influenced Miss Alisa Melton, daughter of Secretary of the Treasury Andrew W. Mellon, to select this hat with softly rolling lines and a suit with a similarly soft neck line.

Union Fruitman Here—
J. B. Weaver, prominent Union fruitgrower, was a La Grande visitor yesterday.

Glad to Get Back—
Dr. H. A. Brown returned last evening from Portland, where he spent the holidays. He was glad to get back to the Grande Ronde valley, where the weather is enjoyable. Boys in Portland winter holds away and the natives are not used to cold winter weather. Tuesday night an inch of snow was on the ground there and during the holiday season winds and heavy rains were the usual thing in the weather man's program.

Intermediate Games Played—
Last night two games were played in the intermediate league the Kingwell squad winning the first from the Smith squad with a score of 26 to 16. Murray Kingwell scored 22 points in this contest but the Smith squad only played four men against Kingwell's aggregation. The second game was won by the Goker squad from the La Fremonts by a score of 25 to 19, the losers playing three men against the winner's four. Brown on the La Fremonts scored 17 points for his team.

but a very large proportion of the raw materials used in the principal Irish industries is of foreign origin. In the linen industry much of the flax is imported from Great Britain. Although part of the wool manufactured in Ireland is of domestic origin even this has usually been spun in English mills and there is a large importation of foreign wools and yarns. The tobacco and rope manufactures of Belfast are entirely dependent upon foreign materials and the great breweries and distilleries of Dublin use a large proportion of foreign grain. In sum, except for the manufacture of food products, as in meat packing and dairying, Ireland is dependent upon other countries for both fuel and raw materials, as well as for markets for the finished product.

"The trade figures suggest a second method of industrial development in Ireland which is fundamentally sound, namely, to supply the domestic market with some of the many articles now imported, particularly where the raw material is at hand. In such cases there is at least the advantage over foreign competitors of eliminating ocean freight on the finished product. There is also the great advantage of the present sentiment of Irish consumers strongly favoring domestic goods."

The Secret.
To be successful all we have to do is to make as much of a business of our own business as we do of the things that are none of our business.—Boston Transcript.

and the fourteen members of the senate who opposed the measure did so without an organization of an agreement of any kind. They made a clean fight and had against them all the interests of Portland and a lobby was present throughout the entire session.

Union Solon Discusses Session

ditions, there is little doubt that the people would strictly disapprove of.

Many conservative and clear-thinking people of Portland did not want the gas tax, claiming it would sooner or later reflect upon the state. Every member of the house and senate who spoke in favor of the gasoline tax claimed that the tourists would pay at least half the tax. It would be just as reasonable to pass legislation providing for the erection of toll gates on all highways leading into the state and charge tourists who came to the fair a toll fee. The gasoline tax would be just a little more palatable and more deeply hidden.

Now, as to highway legislation. About all the demand there was for laws along this line was to create or repair machinery for enforcing present laws effecting truck traffic. The enforcement feature was taken from the secretary of state and placed with the highway commission. As to the auto bus and jitney law there was demand for legislation, but this was all covered save a few minor points by the Moser bill of the last regular session which the governor vetoed and the senate at this session passed it over his veto, but the bill was killed in the house to give way to the legislation proposed by the governor's special committee.

The opposition to the exposition was called the "agricultural bloc."

From Union Junction—
Mrs. John Chadwick, who lives at Union Junction, arrived in La Grande this morning on No. 17.

Meet Tomorrow—
The ladies auxiliary of the B and L. T. of E. will meet at 2:30 tomorrow afternoon in Eagles' hall. Officers will be installed.

Dick Kelly Ill—
Dick Kelly, well-known La Grande resident, is seriously ill. His exact ailment is not known but he has been sick about six months, having spent several weeks at Hot Lake during his illness. Mr. Kelly is being cared for by his sister, Mrs. Frank Dooley and his son, Charles Kelly, at his home. Mr. Kelly is the uncle of Father Francis Kelly, who has received many foreign decorations of valor and is quite well-known in this vicinity.

investigation, declined to question him.

Thirsty Man Sifts.
A farm boy from Georgia, who frankly but pathetically announced he could not read nor write, cleared up his statement concerning the shooting of a soldier because he had sneaked away from his command to quench his thirst at a spring. It developed that the command was trying to conceal its position from the enemy, and that all hands had been warned that the first man attempting to walk out in the open would be shot. The soldier walked 50 yards beyond the dead line, refused to halt when ordered and was shot in his tracks.

Quite inadvertently a member of the committee brought out during the examination of a former soldier that since the war he had served 14 months in the Georgia penitentiary for stealing automobiles. No attempt was made, however, to discredit his testimony. It related solely to executions, conducted publicly with soldiers drawn up as witnesses, in accordance with military regulations.

IRELAND WILL BE PRODUCER OF FOODSTUFF

Improvement of the breed of ulks and Irish bacon is now of excellent quality. Bacon curing is an important industry, centering at Cork, Waterford and Limerick, and even before the war exports of bacon and ham were considerable.

"Dairying is another favorable field for development. Much has already been accomplished in organizing the butter trade but there is still opportunity for great improvement. The growth of the cheese trade in the latter years of the war was also an encouraging feature."

"In the field of industrial activity Ireland is severely handicapped by the lack of cheap power. The annual production of about 90,000 tons of coal must be supplemented by imports from Great Britain averaging 4,500,000 tons a year. The high moisture content makes difficult the successful application of peat to power production and the methods of winning peat must be greatly improved before it can compete successfully with imported coal for industrial use."

Irish Need Coal.
"Not only must coal be imported

Fine Display of Needlework—
There is an elaborate display of art needle work on exhibition at Hill's Department Store today which is attracting the attention of all, especially the ladies. The work is done with the Parisian Perfected Art Embroidery Needle. There are four separate needles which are interchangeable in the holder and which work on all materials. You should see a demonstration of this wonderful needle at Hill's tomorrow.
