Water Freezes When Zero Weather Strikes

With the spell of zero weather that struck La Grande Saturday night water pipes were frozen in many households over the week-end but with the rise in temperature today the last of the frozen pipes began to thaw out today.

On Spruce street the connections with the mains were frozen in several places. This was caused by the street having been lowered in places when the street was brought down to grade this summer. City Manager Gratz said this morning that the water department was working hard to correct the effects of the frost and that before another winter season all pipes about town should be under the ground.

It is the hope of the city that they will be in lowest.

Mr. Brown, of the city, is at the hospital.
