The Screen

[illegible]—LAST DAY

[illegible] of the Cunard Celtic [illegible] the location for the final scenes of "The Price of Possession," Ethel Clayton's latest Paramount picture. Hugh Ford, the director, is delighted with the results obtained.

Winifred Boggs' story of English and Australian life is the first Miss Clayton has done for Paramount in the east. The filming of the picture marks the return of Hugh Ford to directorial duties in America after six months in England, where he produced the first two pictures made at the new London studio of Famous Players-Lasky British Producers, Ltd.

Among the well-known screen favorites who appear with Miss Clayton in this picture are Rockcliffe Felton, leading man; Reginald Denny, Maude Turner Gordon, Clarence Heritage, George Backus, Mrs. Isabel West and Pearl Shepard.

Also showing a comedy.

SOMETHING NEW IN PICTURES IN "A VIRGIN PARADISE"

"A Virgin Paradise," the sensational and spectacular William Fox special which made a tremendous impression while running on Broadway, New York, will be seen at the Star Theatre today, Thursday and Friday. The story, dealing with life in a South Sea island jungle and with civilized hypocrisy, was written by Hiram Percy Maxim, the famous inventor, especially to provide material for a William Fox super-special.

The scenes include the destruction of a tropic island by a volcanic eruption, with the death of the entire population except two persons, and the burning of a palatial country place on Long Island, New York.

The survivors on the island are the infant daughter of a missionary, Gratia Latham, and her native nurse. The nurse dies while Gratia is still a child, and she lives on with only lions, apes and other wild animals as her companions.

The death of an uncle in New York leaves Gratia heir to $10,000,000, and then relatives charter a ship and go in search of her. She is taken to the Long Island home, where she finds it difficult to adapt her half savage nature to the requirements of her radically altered condition in life. Least of all can she submit tamely to the purpose of a young man of the family to marry her for her millions. Her way of resenting his unwelcome attentions is worthy of her upbringing as the associate and companion of wild beasts.

The role of Gratia is played by Pearl White, famous for her dash and daring on the screen.

ZANE GREY'S "MYSTERIOUS RIDER" AT THE ARCADE COMMENCING THURSDAY.

"The Mysterious Rider," a Zane Grey story, filmed more powerfully than ever that wonderfully popular author's work has been filmed in the past even by Benjamin B. Hampton, at whose touch the great novels of the world become marvelous photoplays. This may well be called Mr. Hampton's greatest Zane Grey interpretation.

It contains all the elements of wholesome dramatic appeal—appeal for every class of patron from the smallest child to the oldest grandmother and grandfather, and all the folk who are in between. Because it is a hundred per cent pure entertainment, wholesome, elevating and artistic, the very highest art of the motion picture and the most human, lovable characterizations, breathless suspense, mystery, intrigue, humor and novel twists—"The Mysterious Rides" finds a place in the heart of any and every human being.

There's a lovely lovable girl called Columbine, playe dby Claire Adams. And a wonderful manly hero, Wilson Moore, played by the matinee idol of the light opera stage, Carl Gunvoor. And a powerful, mysterious stranger named Wade, played by subtle, polished Robert McKim. And a ravishing, eye-filling blonde beauty known as "Mrs. Smith," played by Maude Wayne. And a bull-dog sort of man, sinister and brutal, whose scarred face tells a story—the blonde's husband, Smith, played by Frederick Starr, Walter Whitman as Belloun ds, the father, and James Mason as Jack Bellounds, the never-do-well son—foster father and brother of the heroine, Columbine—contribute truly great characterizations, and many of the audience may give their favor to two of the cast we name as last but not least—those famous fun makers of the screen, Frank Haynes and Aggie Herring.

MANY "MINERS" IN TOWN.

Miners, each with a coffee pot and frying pan have been busy flapping flapjacks in La Grande grocery stores the past several days and will continue their unceasing flipping today and tomorrow.

As often as once every 6 2-3 seconds the fastest of these chaps shakes a flapjack out to the edge of his pan tosses it up, and catches it. He never misses. These pancake tossers are mechanical men appearing in La Grande under the direction of Charles Stevens of the Albers Brothers Milling company of Portland and in connection with the company's publicity. They are located in the following stores: J. G. Snodgrass, J. G. Holm Klean Kut Kash, Joel's, Rochdale Co-Operative, Hoovdrized Grocery and Pattison Brothers.

In every store, too, a sample of Albers' Flapjack Flour is given to the housewife who can flip a flapjack.

POPULAR CORN FLAKES DOWN IN PRICE

The Postum Cereal Company, Inc., has announced a lower price on Post Toasties, effective December 31, 1921.

During the war when prices for food stuffs in general were rapidly rising, Post Toasties were the last corn flakes to go up in price. All through the trying period of readjustment last year they held the market steady and now they are the first to come down. No doubt the thrifty housewife will be found immediately responsive to this lowered price.

Largest Known Nugget.

The National museum says that, according to its records the largest California gold nugget was found in Monumental claim in Sierra county and weighed 1593 troy ounces.
