"A VIRGIN PARADISE" PROVES SENSATION AT STAR THEATRE

"A Virgin Paradise," the William Fox special, created a sensation at the Star Theatre last night, where it began a three days' run. The startling contrasts between the quiet life on Long Island, where the millionaire, Peter Latham, lives, and the jungle life on a South Sea island where his brother toils as a missionary among the natives, are striking enough, but the scenes showing the devastation of the island by a volcanic eruption are positively thrilling.

The life of little Gratia Latham, growing up on the depopulated island with only lions, apes and other wild animals as her companions, is intensely interesting, and it appears that the limit of spectacular sensationalism has been reached. Not so! Pearl White, the flashing and daring heroine of episode photoplays, is in the role of Gratia, who is transported to the Long Island home by a search party which comes after she has fallen heir to $10,000,000 by the death of her uncle. Miss White makes the struggles of Gratia in and against the customs and purposes of her new environment more terrific than anything that happened in the jungle where her world was so largely formed.

The story of "A Virgin Paradise" was written by Hiram Percy Maxim, the world famous inventor of the Maxim, the world famous inventor of the Maxim silencer and many other contrivances.

FAMOUS ARTIST PAINTS FOR "THE MYSTERIOUS RIDER"

Benjamin B. Hampton's powerful photodrama, "The Mysterious Rider," adapted from the novel by Zane Grey, is an example of the highest use of all of the fine arts on the shadow stage, as well as being a great, sweeping, thrilling story of love, adventure and mystery in 1921 Arizona. Once it was considered in a picture abounding in thrills and suspense that little attention need be paid to the finer details. Those days are past in the movies, and now a hundred subtle appeals will undoubtedly add to your enjoyment of "The Mysterious Rider," which plays at the AVON Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The services of Ferdinand Ponce Earle, an internationally famous artist, were obtained for the production of the art backgrounds of the written titles. Mr. Earle is a student of the great Whistler, and is noted for the versatility of his brush in the fields of landscape, marine, group and portrait art. Seeing "The Mysterious Rider" is like touring the famous galleries that are rich with the work of the old masters. Combined with the wonderful musical score, Mr. Earle's paintings aid in making "The Mysterious Rider" a splendid art work, as well as a thrilling, human story of romance and adventure.

"GREAT LOVER" AT SHERRYS

The Goldwyn picture, "The Great Lover," is of unusual interest to the public because it is one of the few pictures filmed in which there is a play within a play. This type of picture is not often made. Director Frank Lloyd took this exacting task upon himself when he made "The Great Lover," and achieved more than satisfactory results.

The story centers about Jean Paurel, "the great lover," played by John Sampson, and the principal characters of the play are operatic singers. The plot is woven around the life of these people in the work, and the crisis occurs during the first and second acts of the opera, "Don Giovanni," between the three who form the eternal triangle.

To complicate the directing of this picture, the attitude of the audience bearing "Don Giovanni" has direct bearing on the story. Therefore, Director Lloyd not only had his cast and nearly 1,000 "extras" to direct in the main thread of the picture, but he had at the same time to direct his principals in the histrionic mannerisms of the operatic stage and the action of the opera according to custom.

The operatic singer depends upon his voice to "set over" the story, and the moving picture actor describes an everything but his voice, so the basis upon these two classes of theatrical folk work is almost totally different. The screen actors must convincingly portray the characteristics of operatic singers, or "The Great Lover" would be a dismal failure.

Another complication in making these scenes was that the action of the opera had to conform, of course to the tempo of the music and the actors were compelled to memorize the vocal score of "Don Giovanni" to do this.
