Rehearsals under the direction of Mrs. Norman Fress and Mrs. A. L. Richardson are now proceeding and will continue regularly for about a month for the comic opera, "Bulbul," which is to be presented under the auspices of the Neighborhood Club for the benefit of the Scholarship Loan Fund, some time the fore part of February at the high school auditorium.

There is every evidence that this is to be the most finished and complete amateur production placed upon the stage in this city for a long time past. Both Mrs. Fress and Mrs. Richardson have had broad experience in conducting theatrical and musical entertainments, each meeting with repeated success. Their united efforts in this instance combined with their good fortune in bringing together the best talent which La Grande affords, gives every warrant of an exceptional production.

"Bulbul" is conceded to be the best of the comic operettas brought forward by Maude Elizabeth Inch and W. Rhye-Herbert, authors also of "The Boatman's Bride" or "All Aboard the Barnacle," "Silvia," "A Natural Knot," and "Capt. Van Der Hunn." The full cast, including the chorus, consists of about fifty characters, the whole of which has been supplied. The setting is purely Oriental, from the "Arabian Nights" principals. With its vigorous action, and a most engaging refrain.

throughout, combined with the rich and brilliant costumes, the production is expected to win a most enthusiastic approval.

the world in which rulers were exhorted to put aside dissensions and to "enter into a council of peace with all speed." The appeal fell on stony ground, however, and later, on December 12, 1914 the Vatican authorities announced the Pope's plan for a Christmas truce was failing "because of the opposition of a certain power." Reports were that Russia and Turkey had refused to acquiesce. Along a thousand miles of battlefield, the following Christmas Day, thousands of cannon thundered an answer to Benedict's appeal to "lay down your arms."

Again on January 19, 1915, Pope Benedict took up the task of bringing peace to a war-torn world, decreeing that on February 7, priests and laity of the Catholic church throughout the world should unite in services and prayers for the restoration of universal amity and good will. The next occasion Benedict exercised his humane prerogative was on July 28, 1915, the first anniversary of the war, when he issued an appeal to all rulers, declaring that "blessed be he who first extends the olive branch and tenders his hand to the enemy in offering his reasonable conditions of peace."

In March, 1916, the Pope again reiterated his prayer for the dawn of a new and better day. "Each belligerent should clearly state his desires," he said, "but should be ready to make the necessary sacrifices of pride and particular interests." Previously Benedict had written to the late Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria asking him to "shorten the war," and likewise sounded the then Emperor of Germany on to the terms upon which he would lay down the gage of battle.

In May, 1916, Monsignor Benzoni, papal delegate to Washington, delivered to President Wilson a message from the Pope in which he intimated that America might volunteer to conciliate the European belligerents. The note came at a time when the United States and Germany were in the midst of a diplomatic crisis and Mr. Wilson, in his reply, did not respond to the pontiff's suggestions for bringing about peace. The next communication from the Vatican to the White House came on January 16, 1917, and contained the approval by Benedict of the President's peace note. Three months later the United States herself had resorted to the arbitrament of arms and entered the struggle on the side of the Allies.

On August 8, 1917, still hopeful of saving the world from a veritable cataclysm, Pope Benedict issued in his own handwriting his famous appeal to the nations, exhorting the belligerent rulers to end the war for the sake of humanity.

One passage read: "As to the damages to be repaired and as to the war expenses, we see no other means of solving the question than by submitting as a general principle complete and reciprocal conciliation, which would be justified, moreover by the immense benefit to be derived from disarmament, so much so that no one will understand the continuation of a similar carnage solely for reasons of an economic order." The Pope, however, recommended the evacuation of Belgium by the Germans, self-determination and freedom of small nations. Earlier in that year (1917) he had warned the German and Austrian rulers that a "ruthless" submarine policy would alienate the sympathy of all neutrals. When Berlin put out one of her innumerable peace "feelers," Benedict, in reply, insisted Germany must stop her deportation of Belgian civilians and repatriate all exiles. In September, 1918, the Vatican finally announced it would take steps toward bringing about peace only when invited to do so by both groups of belligerents.

Giacomo della Chiesa, the spiritual head of 500,000,000 Catholics, was born of noble line at Pegli, Italy, on November 21, 1854. His father was the Marchese della Chiesa, (pronounced Keenza.) He received his education at the Capronica College and later attended the Academy of Ecclesiastics. Ordained to the priesthood in 1878 he soon attracted the attention of Cardinal Rampolla, who under Pope Leo XIII was the Papal Secretary of State. He accompanied Rampolla to Madrid in 1883 when his patron was Nuncio, remaining there until 1887 when he returned to Rome upon the elevation of Rampolla to the Cardinalate.

In 1901, after having served four years as Secretary of the Nunciature in Spain, he was appointed Secretary of the Cypher. This position gave it incumbent considerable authority and the same year Mgr. della Chiesa was named as Consul of the Holy Office.

A notable promotion came to him on December 16, 1907, when Pope Pius X appointed della Chiesa an Archbishop of the important See of Bologna to succeed the late Cardinal Svampa. His administration of this office for seven years was characterized, it is said, by prudence and diplomacy. His consecration as an Archbishop was performed by Pius himself in the Sixtine Chapel, an honor so unusual that it attracted world-wide attention. Archbishop della Chiesa was made a Cardinal in May, 1914, less than six months before mounting the throne of St. Peter's.

He took his ecclesiastical title from Pope Benedict XIV, one of the ablest pontiffs of the church, who was born in Bologna on March 31, 1657, and died on May 3, 1758.

An instance of his generosity was cited in connection with a ban he once put upon "tango" dances which were such a vogue several years ago. Friends of a poor dancing master in Bologna, who was ruined by the edict of the Archbishop, appealed to della Chiesa in his behalf. The Archbishop heard their story with the greatest sympathy but refused to yield. Then he handed them $40 as his donation to a subscription for the dancing master to tide him over until he could find other employment.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF A FACT

The Department of Commerce made public today a partial list of funds authorized or raised by various cities throughout the country to relieve distress caused by present unemployment. These do not include municipal appropriations for immediate public works, as recommended by the President's Conference on Unemployment which ran far up into the millions.

New Haven, Conn., is raising a community chest of $500,000, which includes an item of $50,000 for an emergency fund for the unemployed. In Hartford, Conn., small sums are advanced to unemployed persons on their notes in favor of the city for repayment. This keeps borrowers from being put on the pauper list and jobless workers retain their self-respect.

In Detroit, $2,000,000 has been appropriated to meet the unemployment situation. Indianapolis has had an audit of city funds, and with $103,000 available, has commenced work on parks and streets, with a constantly increasing pay-roll of deserving men which now aggregates 1,200. In addition $120,000 was raised in four hours for the relief of the unemployed.

Cleveland's community chest organization raised its quota of $1,500,000 in one week and it reports that enough more will be forthcoming to prevent extensive suffering in the present emergency. In Cincinnati the City Council has appropriated $10,000 for the Mayor's unemployment committee.
