The Screen

AT SHERRYS TODAY AND TOMORROW

Big moments crowd one upon another and tumble toward a tremendous climax in "A Wife's Awakening," the current feature attraction at the Sherry Theatre.

Produced under the supervision of Louis J. Gasnier, for R-C Pictures Corporation, "A Wife's Awakening" marks another stride in advance for the famous director who already has to his credit a formidable list of photoplay triumphs including such productions as "Kismet" and "Good Women," also planned for R-C Pictures.

Mr. Gasnier has touched a lofty artistic plane in "A Wife's Awakening." Not only is the production one of high finish in a technical way but the development of the story bespeaks the handiwork of a master. The story is one that is close to the hearts of every man and woman. It has to do with the experiences of a wife whose devotion to her husband is so great that she places her own reputation in a shadow in her efforts to save him from ruin. The husband, however, condemns her instead of thanking her for her heroic ground work of the story and the climax comes in the form of one of the most amazing denouements ever seen on the silver screen. All is worked out in most logical and convincing fashion, however.

"A Wife's Awakening" introduces a small cast but one of the very best ever seen in a screen production. Fritz Brunette portrays the role of the wife—a part that requires emotional skill of the very highest caliber. Miss Brunette is at her artistic best in a part that suits her perfectly.

Also showing "Fighting Fate."

FOUR ACTUAL STARS UNDER STAHL'S DIRECTION IN "THE CHILD THOU GAVEST ME"

"The Child Thou Gavest Me," which began a three-day engagement at the Arcade Theatre today, contains a story so human in quality and so smoothly developed that the entire production seems to be an interesting period lifted right out of life. It is a ohn M. Stahl production and released by Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

The picture is that of the most lavishly staged that it has ever been offered to witness. While the pretentious interiors represent a considerable outlay of money—visible even to the layman's eye—there is a notable absence of vulgarity, and good taste abounds throughout. The excellent tefours are rare specimens of landscape beauty. "The Child Thou Gavest Me" contains every element necessary to a perfect picture, in which category we are compelled to place it. The suspense holds the interest from the start to the climax, which is one of the most novel ever seen on the silver sheet.

WILL RESTORE PUBLIC ORDER

New Portuguese Premier Announces That He Will Make Insurgents Behave.

LISBON, Jan. 26.—Cunha Leal, the new Premier of Portugal who assumed office about the middle of December, has vowed that he will restore public order in the country and pledged his honor to bring to justice the assassins of former Premier Granjo and several other statesmen murdered in the October revolution.

He is taking energetic measures to keep these revolutionary elements in control. Several military and naval officers have been sent from Lisbon to the provinces in punishment for taking part in political meetings of civilians.

The new premier has appointed as Civilian Governor of Lisbon Lieutenant Agatao Lanes, a naval officer who had declared that he would not wear his uniform again until justice had been done to the assassins of Granjo.

Premier Leal had made a similar vow shortly after the assassinations. His accession to power was brought about within 24 hours after the previous ministry had fallen and was attended by the dramatic incidents. The air was thick with rumors of approaching revolutionary events. A cabinet of the extremist elements already had been formed and was ready to leap into power. The newspapers state that his choice as premier saved the country from a civil war.

When it became known that Leal was forming a cabinet all the extremist elements concerned in the revolution in October last, including soldiers, sailors, civil revolutionaries and some officers met and sent emissaries to the President warning him that they would not accept Leal's cabinet and demanding that Mesquita de Carvalho be made premier. When they learned that they were too late, furious speeches and grave threats were delivered at a revolutionary club and promises were made that the revolutionary program would be carried out at whatever cost.

On assuming power, Premier Leal declared that he would "squash all agitators and those who commit felonies as if they were venomous reptiles." He promised that all his efforts would be directed to enforce order and lessen the grave economical and financial situation in Portugal. He declared that the men who had urged him to accept the office feared that the continuation of disorder in Portugal would bring about foreign intervention. The Premier said he realized that his life was endangered but to refuse to accept the office would have been an act of cowardice.

Premier Leal's task was complicated by a meeting held outside the capital of members of the Parliament which was dissolved at the time of the October revolution who presented to the government a demand that they be convoked in a new parliament in Lisbon. This Leal refused to do.

ROCHESTER, Jan. 26.—By special order of President Harding, setting aside rules of the United States civil service commission, Paul A. Bazar of this city, whose hands were blown off at an officers' training camp at Langue, France, after the armistice, has been appointed a clerk in the Rochester office of the veterans' bureau.

FAMOUS HORSE PASSES AWAY

ESTEVAN, Sask., Jan. 26.—Paramount Flashwood, a famous sire of the Belgian breed of horses, is dead at the farm of George Rapp near Lampman, Sask. He was only six years old and his death is regarded as a blow to horse breeding in western Canada.

As a three-year-old, this magnificent specimen of horse-flesh won the grand championship of his breed at the international fair at Waterloo, Ia., in 1919. Immediately after his victory which ranked him as the best Belgian stallion on this side of the Atlantic, a United States breeder offered $20,000 for him and it was refused by his owner.
