GLADYS WALTON'S NEW FEATURE AND HIGH CLASS VANDUEVILLE AT ARCADE

Jazz music is all right—but oh, what a difference between jazz in a Melody Shop and Jazz in the softly lighted cafe of a fine hotel! Gladys Walton, in "Playing With Fire," her Universal starring vehicle at the Arcade Theatre tonight only, makes the change from queen of the sheet music opportunity to high toned society very sympathetically. She's not so bad in the jazz dispensary, but boy, what a queen in the conservatory!

Really, you know, the flapper isn't such a heartless little creature. She's often pictured as a girl of such cruel vamping tendencies that youthful masculine hearts lie in heaps about her. But this one doesn't even lean across the sheet music counter when dining at the Astor, rides along the Hudson and tickets to the boat show in town are mentioned to her. She merely notices the presence of the music buyers as though they were one of the necessary evils of life, and keeps on dreaming of young Lochinvars with the names in the blue book.

Of course she finds her ideal. His name of the screen—and that stands for a lot so far as your entertainment is concerned—is Hal-lam Cooley, but—spare us from the necessity for elucidation! See for yourselves whether he carries the Cupid stamp.

Harold Miller and Kathryn McGuire work second to the star in excellent performances. One wonders particularly why such a good actress as Miss McGuire was kept in the bathing tanks for so long. Others whose acting deserves commendation are Elinor Hancock, Lydia Knott, Eddie Gribben, an absolutely first rate comedienne—Hayward Mack, Sydney Franklin, Harriet Laurel and Danny Hoy.

Four high class vaudeville numbers are also on the same program tonight.

with accounts of man's sacrifice to satisfy woman's caprice. According to Lois Weber, it isn't only in history that woman exercises her charms for selfish purposes. Miss Weber in "To Please One Woman," her latest picture production, gives a modern setting to the old story. The story deals with the havoc wrought by a certain rich, selfish woman who, having driven her husband to risk his all in her behalf, takes up her residence in a mansion near a rural seaside town to wait the result of his plunge. While there, she becomes interested in a young country doctor and, true to form, induces him to share her romance with the girl he has loved since boyhood. How matters finally adjust themselves happily is revealed in a film drama that is remarkable for its truthfulness and deep appeal.

A new beauty of the screen, Claire Windsor, plays the leading feminine role in "To Please One Woman," and the cast also includes Edward Burns, Anna Lisa, and Edith Kessler. Lois Weber wrote and directed the picture, which is a Paramount release. Also showing a comedy.

ANCIENT BONES FOUND IN PIT

(By Associated Press)

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 6.—The prehistoric past of the fox, deer and antelope offer a field for fertile research as a result of finds in the famous La Brea pits, a tomb of half a million years. Dr. E. E. Hadley, local paleontologist told members of the Southern California Academy of Sciences. He reviewed the past a million or more years in which the movements of the elephant or mammoth, the three-toed horse or miodon, the camel or camels, the sabertooth tiger or smilodon, and the sloth family were traced beyond the pleocene, miocene, oligocene and eocene periods of the tertiary era. While the horse, camel and elephant of today remain they are very small compared to their ancestors who were apparently wiped out by the last glacial period when the great ice fields of the north swept down over a California that was not so sunny, and these prehistoric giant mammals with the stout ground sloth became extinct in this freezing spell of 250,000 years ago, said Dr. Hadley.

But, back in the eocene period a million or more years before, just after conclusion of the mesozoic age, there were no giant animals, and the great ground sloth of the pleistocene age was just a little armadillo such as now exists in South America, he said. The imperial elephant more than twice the size of any existing today, also came from a little animal that probably was no larger than our horse or pony of today.

The saber-toothed tiger, several specimens of which were found in La Brea, was the most ferocious animal in the world about a half a million years ago. Dr. Hadley said. While these facts have been ascertained by paleontologists there is yet much to be discovered about the prehistoric life and pre-erations of the American fox, antelope, deer and bear. It is doubtful whether the La Brea pits will contribute any more, or reveal anything beyond the pleistocene age, Dr. Hadley said, although they have revealed more and preserved for the world a larger variety of preglacial animal life than any other spot in the world yet uncovered.

There has been much discussion of the human skull found in the La Brea pits, Dr. Hadley said, but noted authorities have contended that it is only ten thousand years of age, and does not date back with the sloth and saber-toothed tiger, but a true has been found in the pits, a hyena, which is believed to have grown more than a quarter of a million years.

Dr. Hadley said that none of these animals had been traced beyond the eocene age of the tertiary era, but geologists have gone back through mesozoic, carbonic, devonian, silurian eras to the ancient cambrian era which some say is a billion and a half years ago, and have provided a geological fund for paleontological research that does not promise to become exhausted.

THUGS GET SCARED.

(By Associated Press)

CHICAGO, Feb. 6.—Three robbers who had forced through the concrete wall and gained entrance to the Argo State bank early Thursday were frightened away by a scrub woman as they were about to loot the open safe, containing thousands of dollars. The robbers obtained $1000 in silver, which they took from a wooden case near the large safe.
