FOUND GUILTY ON CHARGES AND REMOVED

Among the charges in support of which the state introduced testimony were some to the effect that Pelletier had conspired with Daniel H. Coakley, of Boston a lawyer, and others to commit blackmail by threatening criminal prosecution. The bank records of Coakley and Pelletier, offered by the state were excluded as a whole but were admitted in four cases involving money transactions.

No evidence was offered for the defense, United States Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, chief counsel for Pelletier, declared that the whole proceeding was based on a conspiracy against his client by political and personal enemies and also that the prosecution had fallen flat because the state had failed to connect the district attorney with any wrong-doing.

Senator Reed said the defense elected to stand on the case as presented by the state, arguing that there was nothing in it to which the district attorney need make defense by testimony. The attorney-general, in his closing argument urged Pelletier's failure to take the stand as a point against him.

Two Boston attorneys—Coakley and William J. Corcoran, the latter a former district attorney of Middlesex county—were named in the original information as co-conspirators with Pelletier, and three more names were added during the progress of the trial. The former were Francis M. Carroll, former fire commissioner; Daniel J. Gallagher, a former assistant to Pelletier and also a former United States district attorney, and Jack Patron, a detective.

DANCE POSTPONED.
 On account of the Elks Ball Wednesday, February 22, the Old Time Dance at Rex Hall will be postponed until the following Wednesday.
