There's nothing new under the sun; Gosh A'mighty, how many times have you seen that in print? Of all the things under the sun I believe that saying is the oldest. What things are best in life? Take music for instance. Haven't the old masterpieces got these new jazz-steps lashed to the mast? And if you're a cheese epicurean you'll think of roquefort. Certainly nothing NEW there. It's not even considered mature until it's dead and buried a year. Then there's the "chicken," but figure them out your own way. I just "mention" the latter to heat you to it.

What I was thinking when I started this diatribe is: If you were dumped on an uninhabited island and were dispossessed of your clothes and all worldly possessions, what would you do? Wouldn't your thoughts be along the lines of "What's Worth While?" They certainly would. If you were of the masculine sex, probably your first effort would be directed towards obtaining food. After that, clothing and shelter. These things are all necessities and usually "What's Worth While?" are necessities. Certainly a thing unworthy is unnecessary. If we would all show as much diligence in doing "What's Worth While?" as we would, were we placed on this imaginary island, the old United States and surrounding territory would be a better place.

You should see "What's Worth While?" at the Sherry Theatre to-day. It's a story with a moral and a picture with a punch. Also showing Larry Seem in "The Sawmill," his latest two-reel screen.

in the morning and labors until midnight, notwithstanding the fact that he is unquestionably the "big boss."

Sir Charles Bell, a British political officer in India, who has just returned after a year's residence in the romantic "forbidden city" of Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, says the Dalai Lama is a "wonderful personality." Sir Charles is one of the few Europeans who have mastered the Tibetan language and this helped him to become friendly with the head of all Tibet.

"He paid me the honor of inviting me into the forbidden enclosure of his country palace," said Sir Charles.

"This was a little wonderland of flowers, birds and wild animals—a hidden retreat where he gives deep thought both to his religious and state affairs. Hundreds of canaries were singing here, and there were also stags, pheasants and a great tiger from Bengal."

The climate was intensely cold when Sir Charles arrived, and for days the temperature indoors never rose above freezing point. In the place of window glass, Tibetans used a sort of wax cloth. It lets the wind in, but they are a hardy race and do not appear to feel the discomfort of the cold.

Mutton, yak beef and pork are the staple diet," Sir Charles went on. "Tibetans do not like either chickens or eggs. They do not sleep on beds but on the floor, on which are placed large downy cushions. You lie on top of these and fold them over you. They are very comfortable and warm."

"There is an official date for winter to begin and end, and the fur hat and other warm garments ordained for officials are invariably worn without regard to weather conditions between those dates. However comfortable the official may be with the fur hat April 25 or without it after that date, he would never dream of departing from the sartorial convention in his public for five minutes. The official

"There are, practically speaking, no police, no firemen, and no wheeled traffic in Lhasa. If a man suffers from toothache, he goes with a few friends on to the flat roof of his house. His friends bring a big stone, round which they fasten a string. The string is then tied to the bad tooth, and the stone dropped over the roof top. Two or three friends hold on to from the parlorial convention in his public for five minutes. The official

INDICTMENTS ARE RETURNED

Three Deputy Sheriffs Involved in Killing of Woman in Pennsylvania

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Feb. 21.—A new step in the "Fannie Sellins" murder case which for more than two years has been cited by mine union workers as a notable example of injustice in the Pennsylvania coal fields, was taken Tuesday when the grand jury here returned true bills against three deputy sheriffs, charged with murdering the woman labor leader.

Mrs. Sellins, a mother and grandmother, was shot during a strike at the Breckenridge mine of the Allegheny Valley Coal & Coke company, in August, 1919.

At the coroner's inquest, held in Allegheny county, the deputies, part of a guard armed with riot guns and stationed at the mine to keep strikers off, were completely exonerated and commended for their "prompt and successful action in protecting the property and persons in that vicinity."

At the same time the coroner's jury expressed criticism of "foreign agitators," which in itself aroused the anger of the mine workers, since Mrs. Sellins was an American, with one son a veteran of the world war.

Twenty witnesses were heard Tuesday and at the conclusion of their evidence indictments for murder were voted.
