The Screen

AT SHERRY'S LAST DAY.
 The announcement of the presentation of a Paramount picture starring William S. Hart, served to pack the Sherry Theatre with an enthusiastic audience last night. The attraction was "The Whistle," a play of New England life, and in it Mr. Hart is the foreman of a mill. Despite the fact that the story is radically different from any in which Mr. Hart has been seen in recent months, its human appeal and drama served to put it over with the fans with unmistakable emphasis.

There are many dramatic moments in the development of the story and as usual, Mr. Hart engages in a fast-paced battle for the cause of right and justice, and as usual, beats his adversary to a pulp. There is no love story other than the affection of a mother for her child, but this adds rather than detracts from the popular interest in the theme. Myrtle Steadman is leading woman and Frank Brownlee is the rascally mill owner. Three noted juveniles, Richard Hendrick, George Stone and Will Jim Hatton add values to the support.

Also showing a comedy.

LAUGH AHOY! JOY AHOY!
 Ship ahoy! Laugh ahoy! Joy ahoy! Heave ho, for the Arcade Theatre, bids (and bawls) too, for Harold Lloyd has never had such a comedy as "A Sailor-Made Man," four solid reels of the cleanest, brightest, merriest fun imaginable. In fact, it even surpasses imagination!

It is impossible to do justice in a review to the new Lloyd Associated Exhibitors comedy feature, for its fun defies cold type, just as the taste of a delicious tidbit or the sensation of a tickle defies description. Its story is human, its titles are humorous, its settings of an Oriental city, harem and palace are lavish and spectacular; the battleship scenes are authentic.

The story tells of Lloyd as the bored heir to a fortune who knows nothing about work and who joins the navy to make good with his sweetheart's dad, and then, in the end, rescues the girl from the wild Maharajah of a fictitious country. Mildred Davis, of course, is the girl. A special word of praise is earned by Noah Young, as the roughneck cop and pal of Lloyd.

"A Sailor-Made Man" will be the attraction at the Arcade Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

WHY FLAPPERS FLAP IS TOLD

Dean of Women of Cornell Says that It Is All a Movement Away from the Conventional.

CHICAGO, Mar. 1.—Miss G. L. White, dean of women at Cornell, who is here to attend the convention of women deans recently, told today why "flappers" flap.

"On the campus—everywhere," said Miss White, "we note a swinging away from conventionality and a tendency to substitute self-determination for the old-fashioned don'ts."

"The co-ed today is the same now, yesterday and forever—the eternal feminine. Girls have changed during the last decade only superficially. They may roll down their stockings, smoke cigarette, doll up, go petting, discard their stays and ask boldly what they want to know, but they are the same girls who wore balloon sleeves and danced the two-step to Sousa marches.

"The war gave them their fling and helped them find themselves. Woman suffrage has given them a sense of their responsibilities. The modern college girl, despite her follies, is more responsible than the 1910 model and prefers to do her thinking for herself. It is for her, not others, she believes, to determine her standards of morals, and she is taking care of herself without much help. She is franker than her elder sister; she is more independent; she is individual.

"Of course the war with its opportunities lifted the restraint that had been placed upon her. She went into excesses. She learned to smoke and she discovered her legs. Prohibition led her to other excesses. I must frankly admit she drinks. But I have noticed lately a reaction from excess and I am not at all alarmed over the future of the modern girl.

"A lot of our girls come from New York. They introduce the New York styles and fads. If New York flaps, we flap. If New York wears its galoshes open, we wear them open. If New York rolls its stockings, we roll them.

"Yet, as I say, no girls ever made a better response toward facing their responsibilities than these flappers. While they intend to be their own censors of their own manners and morals, they realize what they are in college for. A girl no longer considers herself finished until after a course in French, the piano and ballroom department."

GERMANS DON'T LIKE RABBITS

BERLIN, Mar. 1.—Germans are turning against the use of tame rabbits as food. Rabbit sausage was a staple of the Teuton table in wartime and Germans explain its present unpopularity by saying they had too much of it in that "hunger period."

Millions of tame rabbits were imported from Belgium and Holland by the states and municipalities, and sold at a nominal cost to the citizens, who established rabbit hutches and bred them to replenish the beef and pork supply in the war.

Berlin alone bought 100,000,000 marks worth of rabbits in one order, for which the city is still indebted. Whole trainloads of the little animals were distributed from 1917 to the middle of the following year.

Many families tasted no other meat but rabbit for months, and the sweetish flavor of it palled. Then came a time when the cost of rabbit feed became so high that the citizens were compelled to kill the animals and eat them, or see them starve. Soon the rabbit hutches on the roofs of buildings, on balconies, in backyards, gardens, and odd corners of alleys and streets, disappeared.

Wild rabbit is still sold in the market stalls, but the tame variety of the species has virtually vanished, unlamented.
