The Screen

MARRIAGE PROBLEM PRESENTED IN FILM

The subject of marriage and its proper balance has been presented so many times on the screen that it's worth while to note the coming of a new angle to the old topic in the shadow play. "Dr. Jim," a Universal Special Attraction, comes to the Star Theatre next Saturday and Sunday, starring Frank Mayo.

In "Dr. Jim," which is an original story by Stuart Patton, a Universal director, the wife is a society butterfly—but not because of her instinct. She's oblivious to the serious realities of life because she feels neglected and alone. She fancies her husband no longer cares for her because he devotes more time to hospitals and operating rooms than to her. A story of a powerfully dramatic nature depicts the unfoldment of a womanly charm of character that is hidden deeply within her.

Mr. Mayo is supported by such widely known players as Herbert Hayes, Claire Windsor, Robert Anderson, Stanhope Wheatcroft, Oliver Cross and Gordon Sackville.

"SAILOR-MADE MAN" HITS COMEDY APEX.

"Oh, for the life of a sailor!" is the way Harold Lloyd makes you feel after you've laughed yourself weak and foolish over his amazing comedy of the bounding deep. "A Sailor-Made Man," which unfurled four reels of joy on the Arcade Theatre screen yesterday, where it remains until Saturday.

A snug sum has been spent to give this comedy the atmospheric tone of a feature. Huge exterior and interior sets of the Maharajah's palace were erected, an Oriental street and its bazaars contains a wealth of detail. The battleship scenes were taken aboard the U. S. S. Frederick. And the navy atmosphere is perfect.

To point out every detail would consume a volume. Let it be said that Lloyd is a rich idler who is advised by the girl's father to go to work if he is serious regarding matrimony. His efforts at a recruiting station are exceedingly funny, but it is his duties on board ship that make the audience hilarious.

The ship reaches an Oriental port and the sailors get shore leave. Here the comedy gets in a zippy punch. The Girl has also gone ashore from her father's yacht, and the plot takes up some original stunts before Lloyd succeeds in rescuing her from a burlesque and saving his own hide from the villainous Maharajah.

"A Sailor-Made Man" starts with a laugh, and every laugh that follows gets louder, heartier and happier until the final fade-out, which is a knock-out piece of business.

HOW MANY WOMEN WOULD GIVE UP THIS FOR CAREER?

A lot of women would be content with any one of these things: A beautiful home in the Beverly Hills district of Los Angeles.

A husband who is the idol of millions of cinema "fans." A four-year-old youngster who is "just as cute as he can be."

A signature that is good on her husband's bank account.

A separate answer for each change in the weather.

But not so Mrs. Wallace Reid, wife of the famous screen star, Wally Reid. She has returned to the screen and will be seen with Lester Cuneo in "The Masked Avenger," at the Sherry Theatre tomorrow only.

"ALL'S FAIR IN LOVE"—AT SHERRY, LAST DAY

A delightful comedy with May Collins, the new meteor of the screen world, in the leading feminine role, when "All's Fair in Love," a new Goldwyn picture, is presented. Thompson Buchanan, author of many successful stage plays, is the author. The play was directed by E. Mason Hopper.

Miss Collins is the seventeen year old leading lady who, it has been rumored, is to marry Charlie Chaplin some time at the end of the year. She has appeared in several Broadway stage productions, and has had considerable experience as a stock company actress.
