The Screen

LON CHANEY AS A CHINESE TONG MAN

"Bits of Life," the Marshall Neilan novelty production which presents the combined works of four authors, is the popular First National attraction at the Arcade Theatre today, Friday and Saturday.

Perhaps the most interesting characterization is that which is given by Lon Chaney, who takes the role of a Chinaman in a version of Hugh Wiley's Saturday Evening Post story "Hop." Others who play an important part in this episode are Anna May Wong, the talented Chinese actress, and Teddy Sampson.

In other episodes of "Bits of Life" such well known players as John Bowers, Noah Beery, Wesley Barry, Harriet Hammond, Rockcliffe Fellowes and James Bradbury, Jr., appear.

"Bits of Life" is an exteremly clever production and marks the advent of a new type of screen entertainment in the amusement world.

The production is divided into four episodes, each of which is based on a different story, though all are connected by the same theme. A different cast appears in each episode.

The stories on which the film is founded are "The Bad Samaritan," by Thomas McMorrow; "The Man Who Heard Everything," by Walter Trumbull; "Hop" by Hugh Wiley, and "The Strange Adventure," by Marshall Neilan.

"WINNERS OF THE WEST" BASED ON REAL AMERICAN HISTORY

The thriving, hustling towns and cities of the Middle West are strangely in contrast with the far-flung trading posts and army forts of 70 years ago. It will be brought home to the people of this community Friday only at the Star Theatre, when the fifth installment of "Winners of the West" is to be shown.

The band of hardy pioneers and gold-seekers, whose exciting story has been taken from the pages of history to form the plot of a new departure in chaptered film drama, will be shown approaching their first trading post, Fort Bent. An exact reproduction of the old fort, a congregating place for the pick and riff-raff of the country, has been made for the camera, and those who see "Winners of the West" tomorrow will view the hectic life and picthreque activities of the frontier days in moving pictures that have never been equalled for their fidelity to the actual historical occurences.

It is not the West of the "wild west" show or of the "cowpuncher" that they will see, but the Indian-infested West of the gold rush days when the men wore buckskin shirts and coon and beaver skin caps and carried their rifles on their arms—the days of Fremont and Kit Carson.

"Winners of the West" is the most interesting continued screen feature ever filmed. It gets its thrills from actual historic events and its characters from real life. It proves that truth is stranger and more thrilling than fiction.

AT SHERRY'S TODAY AND TOMORROW.

"The Man Who," by Lloyd Osborne, which will be remembered by Saturday Evening Post readers as one of the most delightful stories of many seasons, has been made into a motion picture by Arthur Zellner.

It is a Maxwell Karger production for Metro, starring Bert Lytell in the role of Beddy Mills, the New York bank clerk who tried to become the Man Who Broke the Shoe Trust.

Beddy's ambition to become a Man Who is inspired by his desire to win the favor of Helen Jessop, daughter of an old New York family, who has no use for men who were just "nice and ordinary." So Beddy decides to go about faultlessly dressed, except that his feet are always bare as a protest against the high price of shoes. Going barefoot into exclusive social circles produces amusing complications and inspires a national barefoot campaign.

Bert Lytell's supporting company includes Lucy Cotton, as Helen Jessop; Virginia Valli, as Mary Turner, the shoe magnate's daughter who loves Beddy in spite of everything; Frank Currier, as St. John Jessop, the old New York aristocrat, and Tammany Young, Fred Warren, Clarence J. Elmer, William Roselle, Mary Louise Beaton and Frank Strayer in the other roles.

Also the comedy "Brides for Two."
