

PENNEY MODELS ARE ADOPTED

Famous Fashion Magazine Uses Chain Store Creations for Styles.

Vogue Magazine holds a warm place in the affection of fashionable circles the world over. Its delineation of authoritative fashions as passed by New York and Paris, has long been a source of delightful inspiration and appreciation with thousands of women who are weaned by the delectable of current styles.

Not a little interest is being evinced by the ladies about town in the exquisite gowns illustrated in this magazine which are models embraced in the presentation made by the J. C. Penney company stores. The gowns are by a famous designer whose creations are accepted in fashionable realms as unflinchingly chic and authentic.

In Vogue for March 15th, are six decidedly smart gowns for the matron of youth, illustrated from the models shown at the J. C. Penney company stores, while it is stated by the manager of the local store, six more of their styles are to be depicted in the Vogue for April 15th.

Accident is Fatal to Harry Preston Lewis of This City

Harry Preston Lewis, son of W. E. Lewis of this city, passed on at Moro, Sherman county, Oregon, on March 30, as a result of an accident while engaged in work for the King Construction company of Portland on the highway at Moro. He was born in Wallawa county, October 20, 1902 and was 18 years, 7 months and one day old at the time of his death.

The deceased was a steam engineer but at the time of the accident was helping get the trees ready for the rock crusher when the entire structure fell, a timber falling on him fracturing one leg near the thigh. An operation was deemed necessary but he passed on before recovering from the effects of the accident which produced acute dilation of the stomach.

His body is at the Snodgrass and Zimmerman chapel and the funeral will take place Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the Baptist church.

CHURCH DESTROYED. ROME, Apr. 1.—A thunderbolt Friday demolished the belfry of the cathedral in the ancient city of Nepi, 150 miles from Rome, while 2000 parishioners were listening to a sermon.

EX-EMPEROR CHARLES DIED THIS MORNING

Austria-Hungary was regarded as a mere German state. Hindenburg's successes in Galicia in 1916, in which Charles shared as a commander in the field, gave the young monarch a prestige which enabled him to hold the Austrians to the Central Powers until the collapse of Bulgaria and Turkey and the final crash.

Numerous peace overtures and maneuvers characterized the diplomacy of the dual monarchy after Francis Joseph's death, precipitated doubtless by broad riots and other outbreaks throughout Austria. Unable to maintain his pledge to the German emperor, "to continue the war to the end" Charles made use of the famous "Dear Sixtus" letter, an autographed mislabeled letter in April, 1918, to Prince Sixtus de Bourbon for transmission to the French government in which the monarch said France's claim to Alsace-Lorraine was "justified."

Although the letter was denounced as a forgery in Vienna, the foreign office claiming it had been written by a French ecclesiastic who had been acting as confessor to the Empress Zita, subsequent events proved its authenticity. It was the first revelation of the break between the German emperor and his vassal king. Previously, Emperor Charles had indicated his desire for peace, however, in speeches before the Reichstag. In December, 1917, he declared his willingness to conclude peace with the allies if they would guarantee the integrity of Austria-Hungary.

Conditions in the dual monarchy were rapidly growing worse. There were many cabinet changes and assassinations. The Magyars, Czechs, Slovaks and other nationalities were clamoring for constitutional reforms and autonomous government.

Thereafter Charles' lot was far from being a happy one. He was reported to have refused to send Austrian troops to the western battle front despite the German emperor's importunity. In every way he endeavored to stem the tide of revolution which seemed to be rising. He promised all kinds of reforms and as a sop to his discontented subjects pardoned 24 prisoners awaiting trial at Sarajevo for high treason.

In October, 1918, he announced plans for the federalization of Austria-Hungary and in an address to the Hungarian Diet frankly admitted his throne was in "peril." A day or two later Count Karolyi, leader of the Hungarian republicans, announced the success of a bloodless revolution in Budapest and declared Hungary a free and independent state. Still later the German and other provinces declared their purpose to become autonomous entities and the House of Hapsburg, once the leader of the Holy Roman Empire, seemed to be about to collapse like a house of cards.
