FAMOUS BALL PLAYER DIED ON FRIDAY

Adrian C. Anson, Occupied Unique Position in Baseball Annals of Country.

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Apr. 15.—Adrian C. Anson, veteran baseball player, known as "Pop End" died Friday. Adrian Constantine Anson occupied a unique position in the history of American baseball. His diamond career began with the period which marked the birth of the professional player and closed long after the professional league and game was firmly established as an American institution. To the present day he was "Pop" Anson, a player of the past, surrounded with a mass of legendary baseball deeds and records. To those of his generation he was Captain Anson, the greatest player of them all; the fore-runner and peer of Dan Brouthers, Roger Connor, Pat Tabau, Legs Darbage, Dan McGinn, Frank Chance, Hal Chase, Jack Dambert and others who have made baseball history at first base.

In the embryonic days of the game, during the late '60s; when baseball was emerging from the stage of "rounders" to the fuller development of a scientific contest. Anson made his appearance as player while still in his teens at Marshalltown, Ia. Tall, lanky and lacking the powerful physical development of later years, he stood out as a player of unusual calibre in the town teams of that period, being known as "the Marshalltown Infant."

His fame as a batter and fielder spread rapidly. In 1871 Anson was playing third base for the Forest City of Rockford, Ill. The team made famous by the pitching of A. G. Spalding a few years previous. The leading clubs of those days occupied the same position of the higher class semi-professional teams of the present. Expenses, lucrative positions and portions of the gate receipts found their way to the players. It was therefore but a step to professional ball which Anson took with his team mates in 1871 when the National Association of Professional Baseball Players was founded. Two years later he joined the Athletics of Philadelphia and in 1875 Anson signed with the Chicago Club of the newly formed National League of Professional Baseball Clubs. With the birth of the National League Anson rose to baseball heights seldom reached by players of the past or present.

Under his managerial guidance the Chicago club won pennants in 1880-1-2 and again in 1885-6. From 1876 to 1897, with the exception of two years, Anson batted over 300, his highest average being in 1887 when he registered .421. During this period of twenty-two years his grand batting average was .348 and he led the National League six years and was second or third many other seasons. In the field his record was equally brilliant. For six years he was accorded first place among the first basemen, his fielding average running from .888 to .974.

Anson was described during the heyday of his baseball career as the most perfect player of the age. Over six feet in height, and weighing 195 pounds in condition, he was a lightning fast fielder and base runner, and batted with tremendous power. As a manager he was a strict disciplinarian, demanding absolute obedience and temperate habits in his players. Anson made two trips abroad as an American baseball player. In 1874 he was a member of the American team which toured England, playing both baseball and cricket. The team knew little or nothing of cricket but their terrific batting offset their other playing defects and they won every cricket game played, including a victory over the famous Marlborough All-England eleven by the score of 107 to 105 runs. In 1888 he toured the world with the National League players, party which included John K. Tener, now president of the National League; A. G. Spalding, John M. Ward, Ed Hannon and many other noted players of the day.

Nearly a score of letters and cables from the United States inquiring about Lacaze have since been received by the consulate, one from a New Yorker who had first communicated by cable with "Lacaze's agent" for details and corroboration of Lacaze's story, and receiving a reply containing what purported to be court documents showing Lacaze's arrest, trial and sentence. The New Yorker, apparently convinced, thereupon sent the documents on to the consulate, requesting Consul General Robertson to do all possible for Lacaze, send his daughter to New York and draw upon him for the expenses.

The consulate was told by the Argentine authorities that no such man as Lacaze is in jail, that the court documents are clever forgeries and that this scheme has been used so many times in years past to swindle Argentines, that it was supposed to be quite out of date. The agent has disappeared from the address given in Lacaze's letter.

VICE SURVEY IS UNDER WAY

SPOKANE, Wash., Apr. 15.—Have you ever been arrested for any reason? Have you ever been before the juvenile court? Have you ever ridden the school elevator? Have you ever been reprimanded by a traffic officer or any other officer of the law?

These are among questions propounded to pupils of the Lewis and Clark high school in a questionnaire issued today by Henry M. Hart, principal. Every high school pupil is required to answer every question asked and submit the completed questionnaire to the principal.

Information furnished by the pupils in the questionnaire will be used only as office references to enable school authorities to keep under supervision any cases of delinquency. Principal Hart said, and to allow recognition of former cases of punishment or arrest of school pupils.

The question regarding riding in the school elevators was asked to clarify a charge that certain pupils seclude themselves in the elevator, an automatic machine, in order to use hypodermic needles and take narcotic drugs.

CRIME WAVE IS SUBSIDING

Detroit Has Passed Into the Class of Cities With Little Crime.

(By Associated Press)
DETROIT, Mich., Apr. 15.—Detroit's crime wave, that reached its crest in 1920, has subsided to a ripple, according to Dr. James W. Innes, police commissioner. "Passing of the orgy of spending, heavy sentences assessed against persons convicted of crime, and remaining by Americans generally of their common sense are the factors responsible for the passing of the crime wave," Dr. Innes asserted. "The head of the police department pointed out that there were 58 per cent fewer crimes in this city during 1921 than in the preceding year. The percentage is based upon the major crimes—holdups, burglaries and homicides.

"Hardened criminals are staying out of Detroit because of heavy sentences imposed upon convicted wrong doers but we will have to contend with the young crop of criminals," Dr. Innes said. "These youngsters are now at the crime game. The war and its attending conditions brought them into being as crooks. Many of them earned mere money during the war period than they ever had before and probably more than they ever will again. They grew used to living in comparative luxury. They came the industrial slump and to stay straight it was necessary to lower the standards of living. Rather than go without the luxuries these persons turned to crime. Heavy sentences for those apprehended is having a good effect in reducing the ranks of the inexperienced criminals."

Some time ago Innes in Detroit announced a campaign to reduce crime and began to mete out heavy

ALLOYS TO BE INVESTIGATED

WASHINGTON, Apr. 15.—At the suggestion of automobile manufacturers and large foundries of the country, the Bureau of Mines announced today that an investigation of far reaching importance would shortly be made to determine the cracking tendencies of commercial aluminum alloys. The purpose of the proposed investigation, to be made in conjunction with the General Motors Research Corporation, was said to be to determine whether lighter weight motor cars can successfully be manufactured and retain the same stability now found in the larger and more substantial vehicle.

At the bureau's Pittsburgh station an investigation was said to be now under way to ascertain "the total contraction in volume on freezing, and the linear contraction in different molds of various light aluminum alloys." Commercial melting practice for aluminum, it was said, already had been made the subject of a preliminary study and the results would be made public in the near future.

POLICE SEARCH FOR IMPOSTOR

(By Associated Press)
BUENOS AIRES, Apr. 15.—The Argentine police, at the instance of the United States Consulate, are searching for an Argentine using the name of Gustavo David Lacaze, who, they say, has been trying to induce well-to-do residents of the United States to aid him financially.

The consulate has turned over to the police statements asserting that "Lacaze" wrote letters to persons in New York, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Indianapolis and other cities offering them one-third of a fortune of $480,000, of which he said $280,000 was on deposit in the United States, in return for aiding him to recover the money and providing for his daughter attending an Argentine college. The balance of the money was in Brazil.

He is understood to have represented himself as banker of Rosario serving a jail sentence after conviction of fraudulent bankruptcies and to have said that the documents by which his fortune could be recovered were in a secret pocket of a hand-bag in the possession of the court which could be redeemed by the payment of expenses of the trial and the fine which had been imposed upon him.

He asked the recipients to communicate by cable with his agent in Buenos Aires and, meanwhile to guard his secret. The letters were written in fairly good English. Nearly a score of letters and cables from the United States inquiring about Lacaze have since been received by the consulate, one from a New Yorker who had first communicated by cable with "Lacaze's agent" for details and corroboration of Lacaze's story, and receiving a reply containing what purported to be court documents showing Lacaze's arrest, trial and sentence. The New Yorker, apparently convinced, thereupon sent the documents on to the consulate, requesting Consul General Robertson to do all possible for Lacaze, send his daughter to New York and draw upon him for the expenses.
