NEW RECEIVING SET DEVELOPED

Bureau of Standards Eliminates Storage Battery From Radio Sets.

Elimination of the storage battery, the most expensive part of the home-made radio receiving set, is now possible, according to the Bureau of Standards of the Department of Commerce in a statement released today.

The receiving sets which are now in receiving radio signals, music, etc., over distances of perhaps hundreds of miles require a storage battery to light the filaments of the electron tubes. The batteries must be charged from time to time, it is bulky and heavy, the acid in it is a source of danger and damage to the household and altogether it constitutes a drawback to the general use of radio sets.

The receiving set developed by the Bureau of Standards makes connection with the ordinary electric lamp socket. The set may be used with any type of antenna, i. e., with the ordinary elevated wire antenna, a coil antenna, or special forms of antenna. By special modes of connection, it is even possible to use the electric light wires themselves as the antenna, but the signals are likely to come in with less strength when this is done.

The receiving set consists essentially of an amplifier with minor auxiliary parts. This is described in a paper which has been prepared and will be published by the Bureau of Standards about the first of May, and sold at 5 cents a copy. A few details of the amplifier, which utilizes 60-cycle current supply for both filament and plates of the electron tubes, are as follows: This amplifier has three radio-frequency stages and two audio-frequency stages, and uses a crystal detector. The 60 cycle current when used in an ordinary amplifier circuit introduces a strong 60-cycle note which offers serious interference. This has been practically eliminated by balancing resistances, grid condensers and special grid leaks of comparatively low resistance, telephone transformer in the output circuit, and crystal detector, instead of electron tube detector. In the final form of the amplifier, there is only a slight residual hum which is not objectionable. The amplification obtained with a. c. supply was as good as that obtained with the same amplifier used with d. c. supply. The complete unit is light, compact and portable. For the reception of damped waves, the amplifier as constructed operated most satisfactorily for wave lengths from 200 to 750 meters. This range was determined by the working range of the radio-frequency transformers used. By using suitable radio-frequency transformers, it is expected that the amplifier will be effective for the reception of damped waves and undamped waves as long as 10,000 meters. For the reception of undamped waves, a separate heterodyne should be employed. The paper gives circuit diagrams, and states the values of the condensers, resistors and inductors used.

A Farmer Cures Rheumatism.
"A man living on a farm near here came in a short time ago, completely crippled up with rheumatism. I handed him a bottle of Chamberlain's Liniment and told him to use a few drops. P. Mayer, Parson Wisc. N. Y. 5700 says: 'I was seized into the grip as it were, as a young and hard-working man, and after some time of treatment, I want it in the house all the time for it cured me.'—Adv.

PLEISTOCENE MAMMOTH FOUND

(By Associated Press)
BUENOS AIRES, Apr. 28.—In the midst of the popular interest in the report that some monster of prehistoric species has been seen alive in Patagonia, workers near the town of Las Rosas in the northern province of Santa Fe have accidentally discovered fossilized parts of the skeleton of what was evidently a pleistocene mammoth. The newspapers publish a photograph of a section of a tusk three feet and one inch long and five inches in diameter at its thickest point. The bones are being brought to the Museum of Natural History at La Plata where there are many fine skeletons of animals of the geologic epochs found in Argentina.

PREVENTATIVE MEDICINE

The tendency of medical science is toward preventative measures. It is easier and better to prevent than to cure. Pneumonia, one of the most dangerous diseases that medical men have to contend with, often follows a cold or attack of the grip. The cold prepares the system for the reception and development of the pneumococcus germ. The longer the cold hangs on, the greater the danger. Take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy as soon as the first indication of a cold appears so as to get rid of it with the least possible delay. It is folly to risk an attack of pneumonia when this remedy may be obtained for a trifle.—adv.
