ment the function of which is to sound out and record the views of men in public life—including senators, congressmen and all candidates for office—on the subject of prohibition. This information will be published broadcast, so that no voter need be in doubt as to the prohibition views of those who seek his support.

"We have now gotten to the point where many senators and congressmen are in favor of modification of the Volstead law."

100 Most Members.
Hinckley estimates that the campaign now under way will add 100 members to Congress favorable to relaxing the beer and wine prohibition. That number, he says, in addition to the present members favorable to the change would put it across.

While the campaign is to be stressed this year as a fight for amendment of the Volstead law, that is only the first step in the organization's full program.

"Our original object, which must not be lost sight of," says Hinckley, "is the removal of the eighteenth amendment from the constitution."

Finances for the wet fight, the organization heads insist, are derived from membership fees and "contributions." The total to be expended through national, state and local units, will run into the millions.

the bread must go from mixing the ingredients for the dough until it comes out of the ovens are done with a minimum amount of labor, special machinery of the latest models being used in all processes. The flour is conveyed from the bin to a weighing machine and from this it is dumped into the mixer, the liquid ingredient, being mixed in another elevated receptacle near the mixer. The mixer takes care of dough for 400 loaves of bread at a time and the kneading troughs take care of 600 loaves at a time. From the troughs it goes through several processes before reaching the ovens, the loaves all being one pound in weight. The oven bakes 4500 loaves a day.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Dr. J. L. Ingle addressed the classes of biology and physiology yesterday afternoon.

A pep assembly was held yesterday to help put the Merry Makers across. The Merry Makers appeared on the stage and furnished the students with an improvised program that was well received. A picturization of the scene from "The Sheik" where the Sheik abducted the heroine was presented but after doing his dirty work the Sheik was led from the stage by a couple of camel-walking officers. Jesse Bean and his brother, Grant, appeared in their official regalia and gave the students a heart to heart talk on pep, after which the meeting closed.
