Lots of Glass Used—Forty-eight real plate glass windows, each 12 feet high and four feet wide, were used in one of the costly buildings constructed for the filming of "Foolish Wives," the million dollar Universal picture to be seen at the Sherry Theatre next Sunday and Monday. The glass was used in the front of the set duplicating the celebrated Cafe de Paris at Monte Carlo. Erich von Stroheim, the director, demanded the glass so his cameras could catch the reflection of the massive Hotel de France, and the famous gambling Casino, which is constructed nearby. This directorial whim for absolute realism cost Universal $12,000.

Mr. McGee and his family are traveling through to the coast by day and spending the evening in the various towns he stops at. "I am quite impressed with the Grande Route valley," states Mr. McGee. "It is certainly a little bit of near Paradise."

UNIQUE STUNT. It is not a novelty to rent a railway train or a trolley car for use in moving pictures, but it is unique to lay a street-car truck and remake a car. Yet this was done at Universal City, during the making of "Foolish Wives." Erich von Stroheim's great picture of life at Monte Carlo, to be seen at the Sherry Theatre next Sunday and Monday. Having constructed of exact replicas of the Casino, the Hotel de Paris, and the Cafe de Paris, Monte Carlo's principal buildings, von Stroheim had to install the street car system which runs across the plaza formed by these buildings.

Mrs. Howell Went for Days Without Food, She Declares; Now Thanks Tanlac for Her Present Excellent Health.

"I can't tell you how glad I am that I tried Tanlac," said Mrs. Laura Howell, 4619 59th Ave., Portland, Oregon.

"I had an x-ray made of my stomach and was told I had gall stones, appendicitis, stomach ulcers and other troubles. I spent hundreds of dollars without relief. I could hardly stand the burning pain in my stomach and went for days without eating. Gas bloated me until I nearly smothered. I grew so dizzy I would almost fall over and would have to go to bed with sick headaches.

"But now Tanlac has built me up in every way. I can now eat anything on the table and have gained weight and strength. My housework is easy for me and I have taken the care of two children besides. I prize Tanlac above every other medicine." Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.—Adv.
