Bible Thought For Today

RIGHT REASONING:—Let us reason together, saith the Lord; though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow.—Isa. 1:18.

UNION AT HER BEST.

The city of Union will have much to offer the public this year at the annual stock show. Besides the regular program which is first class, the city offers a completed hotel that is first class in every particular for the accommodation of guests. The principal streets of the city will be paved, and instead of the dust that large crowds assembled at a gathering such as the annual show naturally creates, the pavement will be finished often with the abundance of Catherine creek water making the little city a delightful place for the visitors.

And there is something that Union always had and this year the supply is as great as ever before, and that is hospitality. The Union brand is legend and known over the entire northwest. Be sure and attend the stock show and enjoy all of these things.

Boy Sports.

These marble championship contests that have sprung up in New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania may be opening a new era for boys. Think of the ineffable thrill of being declared champion marble shooter of the town! To that is being added the glory of representing the home town against other towns, and there is talk of state and interstate championships. In a year or two, there may be meets to determine the champion marble shooter of the United States.

Now, if marbles are to be taken as seriously, why not other sports? Horseback have been revived and monopolized lately by city grocers, but there remain various games of the younger fry that surely are deserving of serious attention. We look to see the day when there will be inter-city contests in mumble-the-peck, caddy, duck-on-the-rice, and shinnay, if in nothing else.

So degenerate are these times that there are communities where the boys never seem to have heard of the glorious sports just mentioned. Shinnay, especially, the tin-can golf of generations of husky young Americans, is surely worthy of honor.

Confusion of Time.

The confusion of time at Washington shows clearly the defects of any daylight-saving plan that does not take in the whole community. The executive branch of the government is operating on a summer schedule an hour earlier than usual. The legislative branch is holding its summer time (Washington business, education and transportation are divided between the two systems. The result is chaos.

It is much the same in various other communities. Some cities are involved in a most amusing tangle of standard time, daylight-saving time and sun time, with minor variations of all these.

The idea of starting the day earlier in the months when there are more daylight hours commends itself to most people; but unless there is unanimity about it instead of confusion, it is better to keep one system the year around, and let individuals change their own time of getting up for themselves if they want to, and nobody can save his own hour of daylight, either morning or evening, if he cares enough about it to lift himself out of his daily rut.

Electrical Homes.

The electrical industry reports that there are now 7,650 homes in the United States wired for electricity. This means that more than one-third of the people in America have direct access to this convenient source of light, heat and power. There was a gain last year of 1,445,000 homes. The trade reports a tremendous demand now for electric apparatus and materials.

Hendrik Van Loon, in his "Story of Mankind," declares his belief that the steam engine, with all its noise, smoke and dirt, is destined to vanish in favor of the dynamo. It looks that way. Likewise the internal combustion engine, with its efficiency, noise and smog, may follow suit.

The utilization of waterpower to produce electrical current is proceeding at an unexampled rate. The next step, when this obvious source of supply has been developed, will be the turning of coal into current at the mines and its transmission over high-tension wires. Eventually all homes will be electrical.

Germany Taking to Sports.

It will amaze those who have not followed the changes in German life since the war to learn that for the Marathon race from Potsdam to Berlin, on May 28, there were entered 4,000 runners. This indicates the tremendous enthusiasm for sports that has developed lately. The German Athletic Association reports that new apparatus, stunts, and sports are being introduced.
