CALF FED TO WEANING TIME

Quite Simple Matter if Mother Has Sufficient Milk to Nourish Youngster Properly.

The feeding of a beef calf from birth until it is weaned is a very simple matter if its mother gives milk enough to nourish it properly. The principal part of the calf's ration, therefore, may be cheaply and safely provided by giving its mother the proper foods for the production of milk. Do not feed the cow too heavily on grain soon after she has dropped the calf. While it is important that the calf have plenty of milk at all times, it should never have too much, especially soon after birth. The following suggestions are designed particularly for select animals chosen especially for breeding purposes, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

A calf dropped in the fall or winter probably will do better if kept separated from its mother and allowed to suck night and morning. In summer it should be provided with a lot for exercise and pasture in the daytime, and during the winter with a well-bedded box stall at night. When the calf is from four to six weeks old it is a good plan to bring it from the lot early in the morning, allow it to suck, then take it to the pen or stall to be fed some grain. It should also be suckled at night before grain is fed, then taken out to the grass lot or be fed a little hay in the stall. To be kept contented when away from its mother a calf should run with other calves. A bull calf should be separated from the heifers at the age of three or four months. If the calf is dropped late in winter or spring it may be more convenient to allow it to run with its dam for several months on pasture.

Since milk is nature's food for the calf it would be reasonable to suppose that milk alone is sufficient feed for it. In all cases, however, it should be provided with a little grain in addition to milk. If both the cow and the calf have good pasture and the cow is giving milk enough, the calf will grow to weaning age in good condition with less grain than otherwise could be needed. Frequently, however, the amounts of both pasture and milk are somewhat limited. Then the feeding of more grain is absolutely essential for best results.

When from four to six weeks old a calf may be taught to eat grain. This may be done by feeding it in a creep or pen to which the cow does not have access. Wheat bran is an excellent feed for this purpose. A good ration for the first few weeks would be coarse ground corn, oats and wheat bran, equal parts by weight, with a small quantity of oil meal added every few days. Feed the calf at first one-fourth of a pound of grain a day, or just what it will eat up clean, giving one-half of the amount night and morning. After a few weeks a ration of whole oats four parts, shelled corn two parts, and oil meal one part by weight should be substituted for the ground feeds. The calf should be eating from two to three pounds of grain a day when six months old, or approximately one-half to one pound of grain per 100 pounds live weight.

Unless the cow has been giving sufficient milk previous to this age of the calf, it may be advisable to provide a nurse cow for the calf. To make the most satisfactory growth the calf should have a liberal supply of milk for several months longer. This is especially true if it is to make a maximum growth and show in the best advantage when the fair season arrives. By being fed in the way described, it should make a continuous growth from birth. If weaned properly, so that none of the calf fat or bloom is lost, the chances are it will grow out and make a profitable and useful animal are decidedly in its favor.

The calf is old enough to wean when from eight to twelve months old. Weaning should take from 12 to 15 days, and should be done gradually. When old enough to wean allow it to suck once a day for a week, then every other day for four or five days, and increase the interval until no milk at all is allowed.

MUNICIPALITIES OWN THEATRES

(By Associated Press)

CHRISTIANIA, Norway, June 27.—For several years municipal governments of a number of Norwegian cities have owned and operated their motion picture theatres. When they were taken over by the municipalities, the municipal boards decided the net profits should be used for the promotion of cultural purposes in the home localities. A survey of how Christiania has spent this income during the last year was published recently by the local press. The city has a population of about 260,000. The net profit of the operation in 1921 amounted to 1,342,000 kroner, (about $250,000 at par). This sum was awarded to various cultural aims, namely 700,000 kroner to a studio building for the Norwegian sculptor Gustav Vigeland, 400,000 kroner to a "people theatre" on the city's "east side," 100,000 kroner to a new concert hall, 100,000 kroner to a fund for the support of science and 45,000 kroner to a new music pavilion. In previous years the studio of Mr. Vigeland had been awarded 700,000 kroner, the "people's theatre" 1,400,000 kroner and the concert hall 400,000 kroner from the same source.

The city of Trondheim in northern Norway, with a population of about 45,000 inhabitants, has a net profit of 322,000 kroner (about $60,000) from its municipal motion picture theatres in 1921. Of this surplus 100,000 kroner was awarded to the city theatre and the rest in minor allotments to other cultural institutions and organizations. In a similar manner other Norwegian cities of late years have supported their cultural institutions and created new cultural enterprises.

U. S. OF CHINA IS DISCUSSED

(By Associated Press) PEKING, June 27.—The formation of a United States of China, modeled after the American federation, and a national conference at Shanghai to discuss demobilization of superfluous troops and abolition of the tuchou, or military governorship, system, was the two principal conditions on which Chen Chung-Ming, south China leader, will negotiate for the reunification of China, it was announced Monday. Received With Satisfaction. The outline of Chen's policy came in a telegram to Wu Pei-Fu, dominant figure of the north, and was received with undisputed satisfaction in Peking circles. Official quarters declare the telegram marks another step towards a solidly reunified China. The message from the southern chiefdom who recently overthrew Sun Yat-Sen's administration was transmitted by Wu Pei-Fu to President Li

Yuan-Hung and acting Premier W. W. Yen. Regarding a federated China, it said: "Because the old parliament has been resurrected I have requested Sun Yat Sen to retire from politics. For the sake of the permanent peace of the republic, I favor the establishment of federal provinces something after the form of the United States of America. Concentration of administrative authority in Peking might lead to serious political complications because of the immense territory covered by the republic and the racial differences in various provinces."
