The horses will have to carry a rider, saddle and other equipment totaling 200 pounds and when the ride is over he will have to come in sound and fresh and prove it by going all gates in good shape the following day. The manufacturer has established here and begun to operate a plant that will reduce glass for automobile windshields. It is said to be the first plant in the country designed especially for making of windshields. The Ford Production slogan "Keep Things Moving," is playing a large part in the new methods introduced by the manufacturer in his latest field of endeavor. A continuous conveyor system makes the time it leaves the furnace in liquid form until it becomes a solidified windshield. The molten glass is drawn from the furnace and passes under a roller that gives it width and thickness, and then upon a moving conveyor that carries it 464 feet through a gradually cooling furnace. At the end it is cut and placed on another conveyor that carries it through the stages of "redding and polishing" after which it is ready for use.

FICTION HEROES ARE NOT MODERN

(By Associated Press) CHICAGO, July 25.—Black moustaches may have disappeared from the face of America but the lay public today is as insistent as ever before that its fiction and movie villains wear them. This and other popular conceptions of "bad men" were pointed out here today by Tom Peck, Cross professor of comparative literature at the University of Chicago, who was one of the judges in the selection of a $10,000 prize winning scenario from the 27,000 that were entered by amateurs in a picture-play contest recently conducted by The Chicago Daily News. "Somewhat fewer faces have been the style ever since nine-tenths of the amateur writers were born," said Dr. Cross, "but the great majority of the contestants specified in their stories that their scoundrels should have bold black moustaches. The idea that dark hair across the upper lip denotes wickedness is an ancient one, handed down in folk stories from the northern European peoples. "These blond races have implanted popular beliefs and ideas in the United States today, inheritance telling their superstitions to us over and over again. Their folk and fairy tales are ours. They were always at war with peoples of the southern European nations and grew to associate the black hair and moustaches of those enemies with general villainy and wickedness. "They terrified their children with stories, myths and legends of black whiskered marauders and murderers. Sea raiders and buccannery of a later period epitomized the sweeping subtle moustache as a symbol of ferocity and a means of spreading terror. So thoroughly was this superstition implanted in the popular mind that Americans of nearly all races today unconsciously adopt it. "Another popular idea about villains as shown by the 27,000 entries is that cigarette today are tokens of weakness and untrustworthiness, that cigars are symbols of ruthlessness and hardness, but that pipes are indications of sweetness of character, tolerance, strength, manliness, gentleness of soul, simplicity and general goodness. "This may seem odd in a day when cigarette smoking is very popular, but it is the survival of strong and violent opinions taken by the public fifty years ago and which lives on in the race's unconscious views and come to light in its writings.
