PORTLAND HAS MANY DELEGATES

Beneath streamers in honor of the Dokies, before show windows and buildings decorated for the Dokies, and beneath palm trees erected along Adams and Depot streets, Dokies and more Dokies came and go. Wherever one looks a few strikes his view, wherever you go you will find the treaders of the sand and wherever you are, you will hear Dokies, Dokie bands and very little but Dokies. Officials of the D. O. K. gathered in the fantastic and beautiful regalia of their order, parade the streets giving the city an Oriental flavor. Every restaurant, every hotel, every store and every place will find Dokies congregate.

And prominent among the fezzed invaders in the Portland delegation which arrived this morning. From the Abd El Attef Temple. No. 117, comes Henry P. Bartel, P. M. Hoffer, Frank R. Tanker, G. B. Henson, H. E. Price, Ernest L. Davidson, A. H. Kinner, Ray S. Hastings, Edward E. Collins, Irvin Salem and H. A. Pratt. That isn't all of the boys from Portland or from the Abd El Attef temple, but they arrived in a group and were eager to get a line on Portland, and nearly every town that has members of her temple, is attended in great numbers and the Rose City take make up a large share of the visitors.

CROSS BONERS STICK TO GUNS

The farmers of the Crossbone Game Reserve, which applies to those who have barred hunting on their property, announced this morning in the Evening Observer that they had not cooperated with the Wing, Pin and Footstool club of La Grande in allowing them to hunt on their property with club credentials and with the club willing to pay for any damage that might occur.

The fifteen farmers that were supposed to have been interviewed by the Wing, Pin and Footstool club, were not representative, stated one of the Crossbone members this morning. "We still stick to our guns and we will not allow sportsmen to hunt on our property whether they have credentials or not."

And that leaves the hunters still without hunting grounds and wondering where to get them. Their opinion is that they should be allowed to hunt the Crossbone Game Reserve, this section by the Wing, Pin and Footstool club and by the state.

BRITISH STUDIES SYRIAN TROUBLE

Great Britain's Military Police Studying Syrian Situation; Townshend Favors Turkish Side.

(By Associated Press.)
BEIRUT, Syria, July 15. (By Mail.) Major General Charles V. F. Townshend, who commanded the British forces which surrendered to the Turks at Kut-el-Amara in the campaign for Bagdad, is at present here as the personal guest of General Gouraud, the French High Commissioner to Syria.

General Townshend, after the war returned to England from Turkey and was elected to parliament, where he has appeared as a critic of the policy of the British government in the Near East. A special dispatch from London in May said the government had refused him a passport to visit Turkey, fearing he purposed to deliver pro-Turkish speeches. He was believed strongly to favor the Turkish side of the argument with Greece.

It is believed in Beirut that General Townshend came to Syria in an effort to bring about a reconciliation of the British and French policies in Palestine and Syria. He has been quoted in a local newspaper as follows:

"The Turkish Nationalist movement, which had led to Mustafa Kemal Pasha gaining all the real power in Turkey, would never have assumed its present attitude of hostility to the Allies had not the Treaty of Sevres proposed to dismember the Turkish Empire."

He believes that the Greco-Turkish war must be stopped, and that the Greeks should recognize their claims to any part of Asia Minor and agree to the Turks retaining the ethnologically Turkish parts of Thrace, including the Muslim holy city of Adrianople. He suggests the Maritza river as the logical boundary in Thrace.

"Cutting off all Turkey's Arab provinces," asserts General Townshend, "is quite sufficient punishment for her having fought on the side of Germany. To leave Smyrna in the hands of the Greeks is to create an Oriental Alamo Lorraine that must inevitably provoke another war."

The defender of Kut-el-Amara expects to spend about a month in Syria. He will visit Cilicia, and there arrange for a conference with Mustafa Kemal Pasha.

VAUDEVILLE PROGRAM AT ARCADE SUNDAY

One of the best vaudeville bills of the season will be offered at the Arcade Sunday, headed by the Minnah-lan trio. These singers are one of the highest priced acts in Vaudeville. They are favored with wonderful voices, which blend in perfect harmony. It is not often that one of those kind of acts appear in a city the size of La Grande. These wonderful singers must be heard to be appreciated. On the same bill are Baker and Baker. This clever team of artists both possess musical ability. Miss Baker in song and her male partner accompanies her on the piano. Fawn De Marin, a character in song brings a dainty music with an inimitable personality, representing a cleverly produced song repertoire, and Lazzelle and Caroline, exponents of occasionally daring acrobatic stunts, in which speed and thrills are intermingled with hair breadth catches and clever tricks. This vehicle rounds out one of the best bills presented this season.
