gon barley crop, 2,100,000 bushels, should be slightly reduced. Last year's barley crop was estimated at 2,240,000 bushels, and the five year average is 2,170,000 bushels. The United States barley crop harvest indicated some increase over the estimate of a month ago, and the present estimate of the 1922 crop is 193,800,000 bushels. Last year's crop was 191,181,000 bushels and the five year average 191,021,000 bushels.

Potatoes. Carlot shipments of Oregon potatoes, 1922 crop, as reported from July 1 to August 26, 1922, numbered 23, compared with 84 carloads for the same period last year. But this does not mean that the total Oregon potato crop will be more than three times the crop of last year. This big increase in early shipments comes from a comparatively limited area in Malheur and Umatilla counties, growing potatoes for the early market. (Malheur county has about 3,000 acres in potatoes this year against 800 acres last year). As a matter of fact the total Oregon potato crop will probably not exceed that of last year. The Washington prospect is for a somewhat smaller crop than last year, but Idaho will probably have nearly 40 per cent increase over 1921.

The United States crop is estimated this year at approximately 440,000 bushels, compared with a five year average of 373,000,000 bushels. This year's crop appears to be moving to market considerably more freely than last year's did. For the season to August 26, 1922, 62,177 carloads were reported shipped. For the same period last year shipments amounted to 53,177 carloads.

On business. They will return to their home late this afternoon.

the Pacific Northwest, and the acreage grown is largely used for silage. The Oregon crop is estimated at about 66,000 acres, stood the dry summer very well, and was much improved by August rainfall. The western Oregon crop is generally considered one of the best produced in many years. The United States corn crop showed a deterioration during August, estimated at 132,000,000 bushels, due largely to excessive heat and lack of moisture in Missouri, Kansas and Nebraska, and to a lesser extent in the central and eastern states. The September 1 estimate was 1,875,000,000 bushels.

Hops. The Oregon hop crop showed some improvement in condition during August, and it is believed that the total production this year will not show much change from the 1921 production, which was finally estimated at approximately 57,000 bales (av. 185 lbs.). Dealers report a very weak demand for hops, but fortunately for the growers as a whole, by far the larger portion of the crop has been contracted at sale prices very much above the present market. The total 1922 crop of the three principal hop producing states, Oregon, Washington and California is estimated at about 32,000,000 pounds (175,000 bales), which is slightly over the average for the past five years.

Clover. The Oregon crop of red clover seed, which appears to be perhaps 20 per cent of an average crop. Most red clover seed is produced after a crop of hay is harvested, and the extreme dry weather prevented the growth of the second crop to the extent that very few fields intended for seed were cut. Fields that were pastured and clipped did somewhat better. The alfalfa crop did not fill well and is perhaps 40 per cent of an average crop.

Fruit. The commercial apple crop of the Pacific Northwest is expected to be about 90 per cent of last year's production, or approximately 30,000,000 bushels.

bushels. The United States commercial crop this year promises slightly less than 100,000,000 bushels. Last year's crop was estimated at 64,000,000 bushels.

The Southern Oregon pear crop movement is well under way, and the big name crop is showing up well. A special commercial fruit report will be issued from the Portland office in the near future.
