

LUMBER REMAINS QUITE BRISK

Business in lumber continues brisk. A significant feature, however, is the shifting in the character of the demand, according to the American Lumberman. During the earlier months of this year, and in fact, until recent weeks, the bulk of the demand came from retail lumbermen and was for yard stock ordinarily used in the earlier stages of home building.

The demand for yard stock recently has shown a decrease, but this decline was compensated for by an increase in demand from industrial consumers, which have come into the market in line with improvement in the various industries. The result is that today the keenest demand is for timbers, for car material and for such items of yard stock as are used in completing the construction of homes—including finish and vertical grain flooring. The shifting in demand, of course, has been attended by price adjustments. Certain items of yard stock have recently shown decline, while others, car material, etc., show a steadily firming tendency. The railroads, both in the south and on the Pacific coast, are heavy purchasers and not infrequently they, or the companies which build cars, will agree to furnish supplies in which to move railroad material, but so serious is the shortage of equipment that some railroads find it practically impossible to follow this plan.

On the Pacific coast, mills in isolated locations are experiencing great difficulty in getting cars. In the south, mills west of the Mississippi river are in better shape than those east of it. In every section, however, the mills getting the best supply of cars are so situated that there is competition between transportation lines for their shipments.

Fill with "RED CROWN" and nothing else

Motorists who follow this rule in their gasoline buying find that they not only save money—because "Red Crown" yields more per gallon mileage—but improve the power and stamina of the motor.

"Red Crown" enables your car to develop the maximum of power that its makers built into it. It vaporizes rapidly and uniformly in the carburetor, and is consumed completely in the cylinders. Uniform wherever and whenever you buy it—hence you don't have to bother with carburetor adjustments.

Fill at the Red Crown sign—at Service Stations, garages, and other dealers.

How Long Would This Load of Coal Last in Your Range?

Some ranges are hungry, positively hungry for fuel.

They eat it up as though it didn't cost anything.

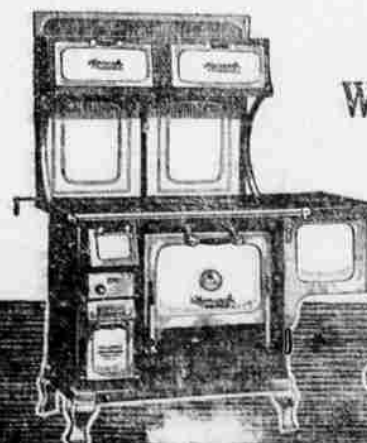

When your range gets too hungry it is cheaper to get rid of it.

But the next time you buy, get a range that doesn't need more and more fuel as it grows older.

Buy a Monarch Malleable Range. It gives the same satisfactory service at the same low fuel cost after ten or twenty years as when it is new.

If you knew the real facts you wouldn't even consider anything except a range built of malleable iron, riveted tight and solid to heavy steel plates, and protected safely against rusting or burning out.

Come in and let us show you how a range ought to be built—and how the Monarch is built. The surprising part of it is that some of the ranges built in the ordinary way sell for more money than the Monarch.
