

KELLY FINDER OF STEEL BOON

William Kelly, Ignored During Life, Now Hailed as Discoverer of Pneumatic Steel Making.

(By Associated Press.)
 DETROIT, Oct. 24.—The late William Kelly, scientist, hailed as the discoverer of the pneumatic process of steel making, has been accorded the honors denied him while he lived.
 The honor is in the form of a bronze tablet placed in the door of the public library at Wyandotte, a suburb, said to be the birthplace of the American steel industry.

Steel men from all parts of the country witnessed the dedicatory ceremonies. The inscription on the tablet asserts the late Mr. Kelly was the discoverer of the process of steel making that has made the building progress of the world possible.

Following the unveiling, William C. Kelly of Charleston, W. Va., a son, told a story that up to that time had been a family secret.
 He declared that years ago his father established a steel mill in Kentucky and began manufacture of steel by the old charcoal method. One day the slaves forgot to replenish the charcoal beneath one of the furnaces. Mr. Kelly investigated and saw that the cold air was reaching the melting iron and making it, not colder, as he expected to find, but hotter.

"My father developed the air process of steel making from that discovery," the speaker said.
 The son of the discoverer related that two English workmen later obtained from his father the story of a process and that later when the elder Kelly attempted to patent his process discovered that the late Sir Henry Bessemer of England already had obtained the American rights, asserting that he had discovered the system independently. The speaker charged that later developments proved Sir Henry had been one of the men who posed as English steel workers, obtaining the story of the process from his father.

"My father established his priority rights but a struggle followed and he did not meet with financial success," the son said.
 The elder Mr. Kelly established the first large pneumatic steel making plant in the country at Wyandotte. Despite the fact that the Detroit suburb was the birthplace of the industry Pittsburgh later was selected as the steel city of the country.

PACKING OF APPLES IS ON

(Special to The Observer)
 ELGIN, Oct. 24.—The Elgin library will be closed on Saturday. Mrs. Wilis the librarian will be in La Grande on that day to attend the County Library Board meeting. It is expected that at least one or two members of the local board may also attend.
 The William Hill home south of town was the scene of a delightful family gathering last Sunday. Among those who enjoyed the day together were Mr. and Mrs. Bert Hill and daughter, Wilma, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hug and two sons, Mrs. Edith Tucker Beem and daughter, La Vada, Lewis Hale and Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Hill.
 At a meeting of the Pythian Sisters held last Thursday evening, it was decided to hold a Halloween party. Anyone who has attended a Pythian party in the past needs no urging to attend this one.
 The Women's Improvement Club will hold its next meeting at the home of the Vice President, Mrs. Floyd Galloway, next Thursday. This meeting was planned to meet at Mrs. Bator's, but owing to her absence from town

The business session will be with Mrs. Galloway. The programs for the year are being worked out with much thought by the committee in charge and some extremely interesting plans are being given out.
 Mr. and Mrs. Gresham returned Thursday from a several days' stay at Lumber.
 Mr. and Mrs. Lucian Shelton and son, Donald, were week-end visitors with friends and relatives in Elgin from Baker.
 Walter Klinghammer spent Friday with his people east of town, returning to La Grande on the train that evening.
 Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Bean and small daughter, Mary Elizabeth, returned to Elgin last Sunday. Mrs. Bean had been spending a two weeks' visit with her parents at Albany.
 The rain of the past few days was indeed welcome to the farmers who have fall grain. The crop is coming up very poorly this fall, due to the dry weather.
 Potato harvest is well under way this week. The McCullough crop north of town is turning out well, and Earl Chandler is beginning to market his crop of 400 to 500 sacks.
 F. M. Huffman spent a couple of days in Elgin this week.
 Fred Hill drove to La Grande last Saturday evening on a business trip. Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Galloway have moved in from their farm north of town. Mrs. E. A. Galloway is spending a few days on the farm as superintendent during their stay in town.
 Apple packing will begin in earnest next week. Truck loads of apples have been coming in to the warehouses for more than two weeks and boxes are being made as fast as workers can be found to do the work.
 The Methodist Ladies Aid Society will open their series of cooked food sales with one held at Hillers on Saturday.
 E. E. Vehrs was a La Grande visitor on Friday evening. Mrs. Vehrs has been spending the week with her parents. Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Wright, during her convalescence from her serious illness of a few weeks ago.
