THE LOTUS EATER SHOWS UNIQUE SOUTH SEA RACE

The desert island on which young Jacques Lenol landed when his attempt to cross the Pacific in a dirigible came to a disastrous end was a veritable hidden paradise, he discovered.

After Lenol had recovered from the exertions of fighting his way through the coral reefs to shore he ventured inland, believing that he had been tossed upon an uninhabited island of the South Seas. But he quickly made a thrilling discovery, for he beheld an axe, a lawn mower and other implements of civilization.

Then he came upon Mavis. Mavis was young and pretty and Jacques' heart beat more rapidly than customary when he beheld her. She greeted him in such a friendly manner that Jacques forgot his plight and began to thank his lucky stars.

Mavis led him to the dean, who Jacques discovered, was the head of a colony of several hundred persons who had been cast upon the island during shipwrecks and had established a model community, where everybody did as they pleased and where everything could be obtained without money.

There was a regular barroom, where one could drink his fill without spending a cent; an immense cafe, where the finest of viands could be produced and where the more you ate the more the safe keeper felt honored; and there were luxurious homes for everybody. The women of the colony constituted a sewing circle which made all the clothes; fuel was unnecessary because the climate was ideal all the year.

It was a regular paradise hidden from the world, and in it Jacques, who had traveled all over the globe during his lifetime, finally found peace and happiness.

The fascinating story of the hidden paradise is depicted in "The Lotus Eater," a First National attraction starring John Barrymore, and personally directed by Marshall Neilan, which is being shown today and Saturday at the Arcade Theatre.

Albert Payson Terhune is the author of the story and the titles of the film were written by George Ade, the famous humorist.

At Sherrys "MR. BARNES OF N. Y." LAST DAY

"Mr. Barnes of New York" is a Goldwyn picture, starring Tom Moore, will give the patrons of the Sherry Theatre, this week, something to talk about.

The photograph is the film version of the famous novel and play of the same name, and has as its theme a Corsican vendetta in which an American with a sense of humor finds himself involved.

The humor of the Yankee (Tom Moore) crops out in the midst of the most tragic situations; and where one expects a tragedy, one sees the situation turn into comedy.

This picture has all the factors that make up excellent photoplay entertainment. There is suspense, comedy, scenic beauty, good acting and feminine beauty. Moreover, the production was directed by Victor Schertzinger. The sets designed by art director Cedric Gibbons are an example of the beauty that can be revealed on the screen.

Tom Moore is supported by Naomi Childers, Anna Lehr, Sydney Ainsworth, Otto Hoffman, and several others. "Mr. Barnes of New York" is a picture that will be talked about when other photoplays are forgotten.

Also showing Alice Howell in "Good Night Nurse."

CHARLES JONES IN NEW THRILLER COMING SOON

Coming to the Star Theatre Saturday and Sunday is a new Fox picture starring Charles Jones. It is called "West of Chicago." Supporting Jones is the vivacious, winsome Renee Adoree, whose acting in Fox productions of late has been the subject of a great deal of very complimentary comment.

According to advance notices, this photoplay is filled with thrills. The action takes place near the Mexican border. To quote the producer: "Startling scenes follow each other in rapid succession. A powerful sweep of dramatic strength carries the mind of the spectator right along to the end. Romance is deftly woven in the story, and there are many touches of comedy."

In previous photoplays Charles Jones' acting has been particularly noteworthy. If all the other elements required to make a good movie are present.

REMARKABLE CAST IN "A FOOL THERE WAS" Without using the term "all star cast" in connection with the William Fox picture, "A Fool There Was," which comes to the Arcade Theatre Monday, a glance at the names of the players is significant.

Estelle Taylor, chosen as the typical "vamp" of 1922, will be seen in the role of "the Woman." Lewis Stone is "the Fool," Irene Rich, "the fool's wife," Marjorie Daw, "the wife's sister," Madison Hamilton, one of the vampire's victims; William V. Mong (who was Merlin the magician in "A Con-question has been asked: In what way are Chamberlain's Tablets superior to the ordinary cathartic and liver pills? Our answer is, they are safer and more pleasant to take and their effect is so gentle that one hardly realizes that it is produced by a medicine.
