Everybody Went Home Laughing—That smiles are contagious no one will doubt after witnessing Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy" at the Arcade Theatre, for the fun that runs in that film is the kind of fun which, after all, people enjoy. It is one of the purest, cleanest, most likable comedies ever shown since moving pictures became a success. First the audience smiled, then bursts of laughter could be heard in the different parts of the theatre, which were followed by a general laughter in every section. When the final climax was shown with Harold Lloyd carrying his bride across a little creek he stepped on a fat hog laying in the water mistaking it for a rock and a splash followed which was a fitting climax! Even Don Meyers, manager of the theatre, was laughing heartily as the crowd left for home.
