Sometimes we do not know what to do in this column. If by chance a little pep gets into it we hear a yell and if it remains as hum as usual it is as if we were hearing complaints or nothing is said. We would rather have it talked about than not so have to resort to extremes at times.

In The World of Industry

Three-quarters of the workmen in the shipbuilding, engineering and allied industries in the Glasgow district are without employment.

The classification and method of manufacturing of pure indigo, which is one of the most important German dye secrets, is reported to have been discovered by an Australian chemist.

A new method of packing salmon for the foreign trade, which consists in filling the fish without actually freezing them, has been introduced by the fish packers in Scotland.

Approximately 100,000 more men are now employed in the manufacturing industries of Illinois than at corresponding time last year, according to a report of the state department of labor.

Party battles have just at present reached their most acrimonious in the United States in the manufacture of carbon black, a material used extensively in the making of automobile tires. Printers, stove polish, and numerous other articles.

Borah's Defeat,

Senator Borah was not running for senator from Idaho this year. He was a holdover, but he saw an opportunity to break up the Republican party's idea of organization in that state and devoted the entire campaign to fighting his own party's organization. He stamped the state with as much vigor as though he were a candidate running in a hard fight, for Borah well knew if organization should stand in Idaho, it is an end to Borah as senator from that state.

With such a strong man opposing political organization, it is very interesting to note that the entire Republican organization with its full ticket won the Idaho election.

The Boise Statesman, disgusted with Borah's insincerity and his clap-trap campaign, came out a few weeks ago against him and showed up his inconsistencies in a way that had a telling effect.

Now that party success has smiled on the Statesman throughout the state, we read a little paragraph editorial which says: "Bringing the old Republican ship safely in to port through the October gales, with the captain (meaning Borah) insisting on scuttling her, shows that the men before the mast know how to navigate. If that be mutiny, make the most of it."

And then the Statesman exalts some more by referring to Oregon's Republican party, which is without organization, by saying:

"That was a fine little election we had. Any serious enmities made? No. Any religious dissension? No. Community teamwork broken up? No. Business interfered with? No.

"Now take a trip to a direct primary state; go to Oregon, for instance, and see the wreck. The Statesman thinks Idaho has had politics almost at its best this year. Every party has had to go in on the merits of its mer and its principles, and play the game.

"As a result of this, Idaho has been strengthened anew with the realization that her sane, sober and conservative people control her destiny. The people have been given new insight into government. There has been education and development in the campaign, and men have been developed who will be called upon to lead and to serve in the future. It was a fine little election, sure enough—good sport, and worth while."

What's in a name? France, having refused with absolute finality to grant Germany another moratorium extends the time of reparation payments a few months more.

Uncle Jim Hill, whose will has just been made public left 14 millions to his wife, which shows that railroading in the good old days had its compensating features.

CITY MANNERS AND COUNTRY FIELDS

The dispatch from an upstate city telling how a farmer saves a motor car from a little lesson in manners and property rights has an application which warrants its greater publicity. As related, after the chauffeur of a touring car which had stopped in front of a farmhouse had gathered large bunches of cultivated flowers from the yard for the occupants of the car, the owner made his appearance and persuaded the motorists that a contribution of $20 to the Salvation Army would be satisfactory compensation.

The incident is interesting as it illustrates a fine common-sense point of view of city folks. Having the country toward the farmer it is assumed that his tools and farm implements are on their disposal for public purposes or for the pleasure of family or friends, unscrupled.

It is an assumption that results in the farmer with a right claim to possession. But the police department of the property rights in the matter reveals a different story. The farmer would be under no obligation to ward a pleasure party from his country which should however from a city laws. It is therefore difficult to the circumstances to note the example of the country farmer who proceeded on the theory that it's a poor pig which squeals one way.

HUNTING IS GOOD

Larkette Journal and George A. Verner's Jay in Oklahoma they has narrated a woman in the charge of a party had accused her. All she did, it seems, was to kill an innocent bystander accidentally while shooting at her husband. The jury held that she was justified in aiming at her spouse even if she did prove a poor markswoman and snuff out the life of some one else. Individualism was challenged.

ARMISTICE DAY

The ultimate test of any store's service is shown when customers return when they are ready to buy again.

The folks in this store are proud of the high percentage of old customers in their clientele. Such friends are living proof of success in our constant efforts to deserve the confidence of our neighbors.

That success is in a large measure due, no doubt, to the fact that we offer the community only such goods as have won our respect. In every line we seek the high standard of excellence which has made this store widely known as "The Quality Store."

"LA GRANDE'S GREATEST DEPARTMENT STORE"

In the Day's News.
Henry Van Dyke, seventy years old today, is a man of letters and a clergyman of prominence in the Presbyterian church, who served for several years as United States minister to the Netherlands. Of Dutch ancestry, it was deemed especially fitting that he should go to The Hague and it was his intention while there to pursue studies in connection with Dutch history and literature, which he had long wished to make. With the opening of the European war his official duties were greatly increased, and he handled the difficult situation creditably. Dr. Van Dyke is an alumnus of Princeton University and of the Princeton Theological Seminary. He has been moderator of the highest judicial and legislative assembly of his church. He is a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, election to the same having been based on his output as an essayist, as a poet, and as a critic of literature.
